OF GOOD USE

Why is it that for the purposes of English composition one word is not so good as another? To this question we shall get a general answer if we examine the effect of certain classes of expressions.

Present use.—Let us examine first the effect produced by three passages in the authorized version of the English Bible—a version made by order of King James in 1611:—

“For these two years hath the famine been in the land, and yet there are five years, in the which there shall neither be earring nor harvest” (Gen. xlv. 6).

“O ye sons of men, how long will ye turn my glory into shame? how long will ye love vanity, and seek after leasing?” (Psa. iv. 2).

“Now I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that oftentimes I purposed to come unto you, but was let hitherto” (Rom. i. 18).

See also Gen. xxv. 29; Matt. iii 8; Acts viii. 3; 1 Thess. iv. 15.

An ordinary reader of our time cannot without assistance fully understand these passages, because the words “earring,” “leasing,” and “let” convey to his mind either no idea at all or a wrong idea. Two hundred and eighty years ago, when this translation of the Bible was made, these words were common words with plain meanings; but “earring” and “leasing” have since dropped out of common use, and “let” has acquired a different meaning; consequently an ordinary reader of the present time must consult a dictionary before he can be sure what the passages mean. Words and meanings which have gone out of use are called obsolete. There is not much temptation to use obsolete words; but the temptation sometimes comes. Therefore we note, as our first conclusion, that a person who wishes to be understood must avoid expressions and meanings which are not in present use.

National use.—A boy from southern Pennsylvania was visiting in New York State. In the midst of some preparations for a fishing excursion he said to his host, “Shall I take my gums along?” His host burst out laughing and said, “Of course; did you think of taking them out of your mouth and leaving them at home?”[2] Unconsciously the boy had used a good English word in a sense peculiar to the district in which he lived; his host had understood the word in its proper sense.

On another occasion a gentleman who had just arrived at a hotel in Kennebunkport, Me., agreed to a proposal to “go down to the beach in the barge.” Going to his room, he prepared for a little excursion on the river which flowed by the hotel. When he returned, he was greatly surprised to find his friends about to start for the beach in a large omnibus. Another gentleman once asked a young lady to go “riding” with him. At the appointed hour he drove to her house in a buggy, and she came down to meet him in her riding habit.

These incidents show that if we use expressions that are only local, or use words in local senses, we are liable either to be misunderstood or not to be understood at all. Obscurity also arises from the use of words in senses which are peculiar to a certain class or profession. For example, to a person who is not familiar with commercial slang, this sentence from the market columns of a newspaper is a puzzle:—

“Java coffees are dull and easy, though they are statistically strong.”

The following directions for anchoring in a gale of wind are taken from a book called “How to Sail a Boat”:—

“When everything is ready, bring the yacht to the wind, and let the sails shake in the wind’s eye; and, so soon as she gets stern-way, let go the best bower anchor, taking care not to snub her too quickly, but to let considerable of the cable run out before checking her; then take a turn or two around the knight-heads,” etc.

If a landsman’s safety depended on his understanding these directions, there would not be much hope for him.

The following extract is from a newspaper report of a game of ball:—

“In the eighth inning Anson jumped from one box into the other and whacked a wide one into extreme right. It was a three-base jolt and was made when Gastright intended to force the old man to first. The Brooklyns howled and claimed that Anson was out, but McQuaid thought differently. Both teams were crippled. Lange will be laid up for a week or so. One pitcher was batted out of the box.”

This narrative may seem commonplace to school-boys, but to their mothers and sisters it must seem alarming.

Our second conclusion, therefore, is that a person who wishes to be understood must avoid words and phrases that are not understood, and understood in the same sense, in every part of the country, and in every class or profession.[3]

REPUTABLE USE.—Let us examine now the effect produced by a third kind of expression, namely, words and phrases “not used by writers and speakers of established reputation.”[4] Let us take as our illustrations the familiar expressions, “He done it” and “Please set in this seat.” Each of these expressions is common at the present time, and its meaning is instantly clear to any one who speaks English. But these expressions, not being used by well-informed and careful speakers, produce in the mind of a well-informed bearer an impression of vulgarity like that which we get from seeing a person eat with his knife. In language, as in manners and fashions, the law is found in the custom of the best people; and persons who wish to be classed as cultivated people must speak and write like cultivated people. There is no moral wrong in a person’s saying “Please set in this seat,” and if he does say it he will probably be understood; but persons who use this or any other expression which is not in reputable use run the risk of being classed as ignorant, affected, or vulgar.

GOOD USE.—It appears, therefore, that words and phrases, in order to be proper expressions for use in English prose, (1) must be in common use at the present time;

(2) they must be used, and used in the same sense, in every part of the country, and in every class and profession; (3) they must be expressions used by writers and speakers of established reputation. In other words, our expressions must be in present, national, and reputable use. Expressions which fulfil these three conditions are said to be in good use.

The next question that presents itself to one who wishes to use English correctly is, How am I to know what words and expressions are in good use?

CONVERSATION AND GOOD USE.—Good use cannot be determined solely by observing the conversation of our associates; for the chances are that they use many local expressions, some slang, and possibly some vulgarisms. “You often hear it” is not proof that an expression is in good use.

NEWSPAPERS AND GOOD USE.—Nor can good use be learned from what we see in newspapers. Newspapers of high rank contain from time to time, especially in their editorial columns, some of the best modern prose, and much literature that has become standard was first printed in periodicals; but most of the prose in newspapers is written necessarily by contributors who do not belong to the class of “speakers or writers whom the world deems the best.” As the newspaper in its news records the life of every day, so in its style it too frequently records the slang of daily life and the faults of ordinary conversation. A newspaper contains bits of English prose from hundreds of different pens, some skilled, some unskilled; and this jumble of styles does not determine good use.

NO ONE BOOK OR WRITER DECISIVE.—Nor is good use to be learned from our favorite author, unsupported by other authority; not even, as we have seen, from the English Bible, when it stands alone. No writer, even the greatest, is free from occasional errors; but these accidental slips are not to be considered in determining good use. Good use is decided by the prevailing usage of the writers whose works make up permanent English literature, not by their inadvertencies. “The fact that Shakspeare uses a word, or Sir Walter Scott, or Burke, or Washington Irving, or whoever happens to be writing earnestly in Melbourne or Sidney, does not make it reputable. The fact that all five of these authorities use the word in the same sense would go very far to establish the usage. On the other hand, the fact that any number of newspaper reporters agree in usage does not make the usage reputable. The style of newspaper reporters is not without merit; it is very rarely unreadable; but for all its virtue it is rarely a well of English undefiled.”[5]

“Reputable use is fixed, not by the practice of those whom A or B deems the best speakers or writers, but by the practice of those whom the world deems the best,—those who are in the best repute, not indeed as to thought, but as to expression, the manner of communicating thought. The practice of no one writer, however high he may stand in the public estimation, is enough to settle a point; but the uniform or nearly uniform practice of reputable speakers or writers is decisive.”[6]

GOOD READING THE FOUNDATION OF GOOD SPEAKING AND WRITING.—To the question how to become familiar with good use the first answer is, read the best literature. Language, like manners, is learned for the most part by imitation; and a person who is familiar with the language of reputable writers and speakers will use good English without conscious effort, just as a child brought up among refined people generally has good manners without knowing it. Good reading is indispensable to good speaking or writing. Without this, rules and dictionaries are of no avail. In reading the biographies of eminent writers, it is interesting to note how many of them were great readers when they were young; and teachers can testify that the best writers among their pupils are those who have read good literature or who have been accustomed to hear good English at home. The student of expression should begin at once to make the acquaintance of good literature.

THE USE OF DICTIONARIES.—To become acquainted with good literature, however, takes a long time; and to decide, by direct reference to the usage of the best writers, every question that arises in composition, is not possible for beginners. In certain cases beginners must go to dictionaries to learn what good use approves. Dictionaries do not make good use, but by recording the facts learned by professional investigators they answer many questions regarding it. To one who wishes to speak and write well a good dictionary is indispensable.

“THE FOUNDATIONS OF RHETORIC.”—Dictionaries, however, are not always a sufficient guide; for, being records, they aim to give all the senses in which a word is used, and do not always tell which sense is approved by the best usage. Large dictionaries contain many words which have gone out of good use and other words which have not yet come into good use. Moreover, they treat of words only, not of constructions and long expressions. Additional help in determining good use is required by beginners, and this help is to be found in such books as Professor A.S. Hill’s “Foundations of Rhetoric.” The investigations of a specialist are there recorded in a convenient form, with particular reference to the needs of beginners and of those who have been under the influence of bad models. Common errors are explained and corrected, and the fundamental merits of good expression are set forth and illustrated.

PURPOSE OF THESE EXERCISES.—In the following exercises, which are intended for drill on some of these elements of good expression, care has been taken to put the questions into the forms in which they arise in actual composition. The notes which precede the exercises are only hints; for full discussions of the principles involved the student must consult larger works.

Hill: Foundations of Rhetoric, p. 28. [4] Ibid., p. 20. [5] Barrett Wendell: English Composition, p. 21. [6] A.S. Hill: Principles of Rhetoric, revised edition, p. 16.

EXERCISE I.

1. Make a list of the provincial expressions you can think of, and give their equivalents in national English.
2. Make a list of the slang or vulgar expressions you can think of, and give their equivalents in reputable English.
3. Make a list of the words, forms, and phrases not in present use which you can find in the second chapter of the Gospel of Matthew, authorized version, and give their equivalents in modern English.

EXERCISE II.

Which word in the following pairs should an American prefer? Consult Hill's "Foundations of Rhetoric," pp. 28-29: Coal, coals; jug, pitcher; street railway, tramway; post-card, postal-card; depA't, station.

EXERCISE III.

Page 6

1. Arrange the following words in two columns, putting in the first column words that are in good use, in the second, words that are not in good use. Consult Hill's "Foundations of Rhetoric," pp. 27-29: Omnibus, succotash, welkin, ere, nA(C)e, depA't, veto, function (in the sense of social entertainment), to pan out, twain, on the docket, kine, gerrymander, carven, caucus, steed, to coast (on sled or bicycle), posted (informed), to watch out, right (very).
2. Give good English equivalents for the words which are not in good use.

CHAPTER II.

OF ARTICLES

A or AN.[7]—The choice between these forms is determined by sound, not by spelling. Before a consonant sound "a" is used; before a vowel sound "an" is used.

[7] "Foundations," pp. 32-36.

EXERCISE IV.

Put the proper form, "a" or "an," before each of these expressions:—Elephant, apple, egg, union of states, uniform, uninformed person, universal custom, umpire, Unitarian church, anthem, unfortunate man, united people, American, European, Englishman, one, high hill, horse, honorable career, hypocrite, humble spirit, honest boy, hypothesis, history, historical sketch, heir, hundred, hereditary disease, household.

THE or A.[8]—"The" is a broken-down form of the old English thoet, from which we also get "that," and is used to point out some particular person, thing, or class: as, "The headmaster of the school gave the boys permission." When "the" is used before the name of a particular class of persons or things it is called the "generic" article (from genus, "a class"): as, "None but the brave deserve the fair"; "The eagle is our national bird."

"An" ("a") is a broken-down form of the old English word ane, meaning "one." It is properly used when the object is thought of as one of a class: as, "There is an eagle in the zoological garden." It cannot properly be used before a word which is used as a class name, because a class name includes in its meaning more than "one."

SUPERFLUOUS and OMITTED ARTICLES.[9]—The use of a superfluous "a" or "an" before a class name, especially after the words "sort" and "kind," is a common and obstinate error. We may say, "This is an eagle," meaning "one eagle." But we may not say, "An eagle is our national bird," "This is a rare kind of an eagle," or, "It is not worthy of the name of an eagle"; because in these sentences "eagle" is used as the name, not of a single bird, but of a class of birds, and includes in its meaning all the birds which belong to the class called "eagle." The sentences are equivalent to: "The kind of bird called 'eagle' is our national bird;" "This is a rare species of the class of birds called 'eagle;'" "It is not worthy of the name given to the birds which belong to the class called 'eagle.'"

24. It is found in both — old and — new editions. 25. The fourth and — fifth verse. 26. The fourth and — fifth verses. 27. Abraham Lincoln was — great and — good man. 28. — families of — strikers are sadly in — need of food. 29. Here are two bottles, — one empty, — other full of — red liquid.
30. Ariel had — power to control — sea. 31. Evangeline travelled far in — search of Gabriel. 33. Illustrate by an original sentence — preterite and — past participle of the following verbs.
33. To — student of Latin or Greek a knowledge of — difference in meaning in English between — indicative and — subjunctive is especially important.
34. In the verb “to be” — present and — past subjunctives have different forms.
35. — life in Madras in — time of Clive was different from what it is now.
36. I like so many sports that it is hard to tell which I like — best.
I like swimming, foot-ball, and riding more than — others, but I do not know which of these three I like — best.

CHAPTER III.

OF NOUNS

HOW TO FORM THE POSSESSIVE CASE.[10]—As a rule, the possessive of nouns in the SINGULAR number is formed by adding an apostrophe and “s” (’s): as, “The boy’s coat.” Often the pronunciation of the added “s” makes a new syllable; and if this additional syllable makes an unpleasant sound, the possessive is indicated by the apostrophe alone (’): as, “For goodness’ sake.” The putting in or the leaving out of the “s” in such cases is chiefly a matter of taste. If the “s” is sounded, it is always written; and whenever there is doubt, it is well to follow the regular rule: as, “Horace’s odes,” “Charles’s ball,” “Dickens’s David Copperfield.”

In the PLURAL number, when the nominative plural ends in “s,” the possessive case is formed by adding an apostrophe alone (’). If the nominative plural does not end in “s,” an apostrophe and an “s” (’s) are both added, as in the singular: as, “Men’s and boys’ shoes.”

The possessive case of COMPOUND nouns and expressions used as compound nouns is formed by adding the proper sign of the possessive to the end of the compound: as, “That is my sister-in-law’s pony,” “This is the Prince of Wales’s palace.”

[10] "Foundations," pp. 41-43.

EXERCISE VII.[11]

1. Write the possessive case, singular and plural, of: Actor, king, fairy, calf, child, goose, lady, monkey, mouse, ox, woman, deer, eagle, princess, elephant, man, witness, prince, fox, farmer, countess, mouth, horse, day, year, lion, wolf, thief, Englishman.
2. Write the possessive case of: James, Dickens, his sister Mary, Miss Austen, the Prince of Wales, Frederick the Great, Harper and Brothers, father-in-law, Charles, Jones, William the Conqueror, Henry the Eighth, man-of-war, Douglas, Eggleston and Company.

Page 9

USE and MISUSE of the POSSESSIVE CASE.[12]—It is sometimes a question whether to use the possessive form or the preposition of. “As a general rule, the possessive case should be confined to cases of possession.”[13]

[11] TO THE TEACHER.—To have its full value this should be given as a dictation exercise. [12] “Foundations,” pp. 43-44. [13] Ibid., p. 44.

EXERCISE VIII.

Express relation between the words in the following pairs by putting one of them in the possessive case or by using the preposition “of,” as may seem best:—

Charles the Second, reign; witness, testimony; horse, hoof; the President, public reception; Partridge, restaurant; aide-de-camp, horse; General Armistead, death; Henry the Eighth, wives; Napoleon, Berlin decree; teacher, advice; eagle, talons; enemy, repulse;[14] book, cover; princess, evening gowns; France, army; Napoleon, defeat; Napoleon, camp-chest; Major AndrA(C), capture; Demosthenes, orations; gunpowder, invention; mountain, top; summer, end; Washington, sword; Franklin, staff; torrent, force; America, metropolis; city, streets; strike, beginning; church, spire; we (our, us), midst; year, events; Guiteau, trial; sea, bottom; Essex, death; Adams, administration; six months, wages; world, government.

[14] There is, properly, no “objective possessive” in English corresponding to the “objective genitive” in other languages. It seems best to say “The siege of Paris,” rather than “Paris’s siege.”

EXERCISE IX.

Distinguish between the following:— 1. The President’s reception. The reception of the President. 2. Mother’s love. Love of mother. 3. A sister’s care. Care of a sister. 4. A brother’s picture. The picture of a brother. 5. Clive’s reception in London. The reception of Clive in London. 6. Charles and Harry’s toys. Charles’s and Harry’s toys. 7. Let me tell you a story of Doctor Brown (Brown’s).

EXERCISE X.

Correct the following, giving the reason for each correction:— 1. A dog and a cat’s head are differently shaped. 2. Whose Greek grammar do you prefer—Goodwin or Hadley? 3. It is neither the captain nor the manager’s duty. 4. I consulted Webster, Stormonth, and Worcester’s dictionary. 5. I like Hawthorne better than Irving’s style. 6. John, Henry and William’s nose resembled one another. 7. The novel is one of Scott. 8. I have no time to listen to either John or Joseph’s talk.

SINGULAR and PLURAL.[15]—In modern English most nouns form the plural by adding “s” to the singular. The following variations from this rule are important:—

1. When the added sound of “s” makes an additional syllable, “es” is used:
as, box, boxes; church, churches.

Page 10

2. NOUNS ENDING IN "O." If the final "o" is preceded by a vowel, the plural is formed regularly, i.e., by adding "s": as, cameo, cameos. If the final "o" is preceded by a consonant, the tendency of modern usage is to form the plural by adding "es": as, hero, heroes; potato, potatoes. The following common words, however, seem still to form the plural by adding "s" alone:—

canto lasso proviso torso duodecimo memento quarto tyro halo octavo solo junto piano stiletto

3. NOUNS ENDING IN "Y." If the "y" is preceded by a vowel, the plural is regular: as, valley, valleys.

If the "y" is preceded by a consonant, "y" is changed to "i" and "es" is added to form the plural: as, lady, ladies; city, cities.

4. PROPER NOUNS are changed as little as possible: as, Henry, Henrys; Mary, Marys; Cicero, Ciceros; Nero, Neros.

5. Most COMPOUND NOUNS form the plural by adding the proper sign of the plural to the fundamental part of the word, i.e., to the part which is described by the rest of the phrase: as, ox-cart, ox-carts; court-martial, courts-martial; aide-de-camp, aides-de-camp.

Note the difference between the plural and the possessive of compound nouns,—forms which are often confounded. See page 16.

6. Letters, figures, and other symbols are made plural by adding an apostrophe and "s" ('s): as, "There are more e's than a's in this word"; "Dot your i's and cross your t's."

7. Some nouns have two plurals, which differ in meaning:—

Singular. Plural.

brother	brothers (by birth), brethren (of a society).
die	dies (for coining or stamping), dice (for play).
fish	fishes (separate fish), fish (collective).
index	indexes (in books), indices (in algebra).
penny	pennies (separate coins), pence (sum of money).
shot	shots (discharges), shot (balls).
staff	staves (poles), staffs (bodies of assistants).

[15] "Foundations," pp. 45-47.

EXERCISE XI.[16]

Write the plural of: Lash, cage, race, buffalo, echo, canto, volcano, portfolio, ally, money, solo, memento, mosquito, bamboo, ditch, chimney, man, Norman,[17] Mussulman, city, negro, baby, calf, man-of-war, attorney, goose-quill, canon, quail, mystery, turkey, wife, body, snipe, knight-errant,[17] donkey, spoonful, aide-de-camp, Ottoman, commander-in-chief, major-general, pony, reply, talisman, court-martial, father-in-law, court-yard, man-trap, Brahman, journey, Henry, stepson, deer, mouthful, Miss Clark,[18] Mr. Jones, Dr. Brown, Dutchman, German, forget-me-not, poet-laureate, minister-plenipotentiary, hero, fish, trout, Mary, George, bill-of-fare.

[16] To THE TEACHER.—To have its full value this should be given as a dictation exercise. [17] Consult a dictionary for this and similar nouns. [18] Proper names preceded by a title are made plural by changing either the name or the title, and using “the” before the expression. We may say “the Miss Smiths” or “the Misses Smith,” “the Doctors Young” or “the Doctor Youngs.”

EXERCISE XII.

Distinguish between:—

1. Two dice (dies) were found in the prisoner’s pockets. 2. He was always kind to his brothers (brethren). 3. How many shot (shots) did you count? 4. He carried two pailfuls (pails full) of water up the hill. 5. I have two handfuls (hands full) of gold-dust. 6. He gave the beggar six pennies (pence). 7. There are serious errors in the indexes (indices) in this new Algebra. 8. Ten shot (shots) were fired from the gun in fifteen minutes.

EXERCISE XIII.

Which of the following forms should be used? Consult Hill’s “Foundations,” pp. 45-47:

1. The members of the committee were greatly alarmed at this (these) news. 2. Tidings was (were) brought to them of the massacre on Snake River. 3. The endowment of the college was greatly increased by this (these) means.
4. The widow’s means was (were) at first large, but it was (they were) soon exhausted by the prodigality of her son.
5. The assets of the company are (is) $167,000. 6. The dregs in the cup was (were) found to be very bitter. 7. The eaves of the new house are (is) thirty-two feet above the ground. 8. Athletics are (is) run into the ground in many schools. 9. Politics is (are) like a stone tied around the neck of literature. 10. The nuptials of Gratiano and Nerissa were (was) celebrated at the same time as those (that) of Bassanio and Portia.
11. Ethics are (is) becoming more and more prominent in the discussions of political economists.
12. Have you seen my pincers? I have mislaid it (them). 13. The proceeds was (were) given to the hospital. 14. His riches took to themselves (itself) wings. 15. This (these) scissors is (are) not sharp. 16. Please pour this (these) suds on the rose plants in the oval flowerbed. 17. His tactics was (were) much criticised by old generals. 18. The United States has (have) informed Spain that it (they) will not permit Spanish interference in the affairs of Central America.

NOUNS of FOREIGN ORIGIN.[19]—The following is a list of nouns of foreign origin in common use which have peculiar number forms:—

Page 12

Singular. Plural. alumnus (masculine) alumni alumna (feminine) alumnae analysis analyses bacterium bacteria beau beaux cherub cherubim (or cherubs) crisis crises curriculum curricula datum data genus (meaning "class") genera genius {geniuses (persons or great ability)

{genii (spirits)

hypothesis hypotheses oasis oases parenthesis parentheses phenomenon phenomena seraph seraphim (or seraphs) stratum strata tableau tableaux thesis theses

[19] "Foundations," pp. 47-48.

EXERCISE XIV.[20]

1. Write the plural of: Alumna, analysis, beau, cherub, crisis, curriculum, genus, genius, hypothesis, nebula, oasis, parenthesis, phenomenon, synopsis, seraph, stratum, tableau.
2. Write the singular of: Alumni, curricula, data, bacteria, cherubim, oases, phenomena, seraphim, strata, theses.

GENDER.—The following nouns of different genders are sometimes confounded or otherwise misused:—

Masculine. Feminine.

abbot	abbess
actor	actress
bachelor	spinster, maid
buck	doe (fallow deer)
bullock	heifer
czar	czarina
drake	duck
duke	duchess
earl	countess
Francis	Frances
gander	goose
hero	heroine
lion	lioness
marquis, marquess	marchioness
monk	nun

2. He married a beautiful actor.
3. The tiger broke from its cage.
4. The duck was pluming his feathers after his swim, and the goose had wandered from his companions across the meadows.
5. The baby girl in "The Princess" may be called the real hero of the tale.

Page 13

ABBREVIATIONS.—For the following exercise consult Hill's Foundations of Rhetoric, pp. 49-50.

EXERCISE XVII.

Which of these words are in good use?—

Pianist, harpist, poloist, violinist, phiz, ad, co-ed, curios, exam, cab, chum, gent, hack, gym, pants, mob, phone, proxy, photo, prelim, van, prof, varsity.

MISUSED NOUNS.[22]—Many errors in English consist in using words in senses which are not authorized. Sometimes the use of a word in a wrong sense makes the speaker's meaning obscure. Sometimes it makes him seem ridiculous, as when a person of the writer's acquaintance told a friend to clean an oil-painting by washing it in "torpid" water. In every case the misuse of a word leaves an unpleasant impression on the mind of a cultivated person, and, like all bad English, should be avoided as we avoid bad manners. In the following definitions and exercises a few nouns[23] are selected for study. The distinctions given are not always observed by reputable authors, but they indicate the tendency of the best modern usage.

I. A RESEMBLANCE IN SENSE MISLEADS.[24]

HOUSE, HOME.—A house is a building. Home means one's habitual abode, "the abiding place of the affections." It may or may not be in a house, and it may include the surroundings of a house.

PERSON, PARTY.—A person is an individual, a party is a company of persons, or, in legal usage, a person who is concerned in a contention or agreement.

SERIES, SUCCESSION.—A series is a succession of similar things mutually related according to some law. Succession is properly used of several things following one after the other; it denotes order of occurrence only, and does not imply any connection.

STATEMENT, ASSERTION.—A statement is a formal setting forth of fact or opinion; an assertion is simply an affirmation of fact or opinion.

VERDICT, TESTIMONY.—A verdict is a decision made by a number of men acting as a single body. Testimony is an expression of individual knowledge or belief.

THE WHOLE, ALL.—The whole is properly used of something which is considered as one thing. When a number of persons or things are spoken of, the proper word is all.

[22] TO THE TEACHER.—It may not be desirable to drill pupils on all the words whose meanings are discriminated here and in chapters V. and VI. In that case it will be easy to select for study those words which the pupils are most likely to misuse. The words discriminated in this book are for the most part those which are mentioned in the "Foundations of Rhetoric," and they have been arranged in the same order. A few other words often misused by my pupils have been added. [23] For misused verbs and adjectives see pages 92 and 119. [24] "Foundations," pp. 50-53.

EXERCISE XVIII.

Tell the difference in meaning between the following:— 1. Mr. Roscoe has no house (home). 2. The hotel clerk says he expects three more parties (persons) on the six o'clock train.

3. There are three persons (parties) concerned in this contract. 4. A succession (series) of delays. 5. This morning's papers publish an assertion (a statement) by Mr. Pullman, which throws new light on the strike.

EXERCISE XIX.

Insert the proper word in each blank, and give the reason for your choice.—

HOUSE, HOME. 1. Whenever a tramp comes to our —, the dog is untied. 2. His new — will be finished in November. 3. Mr. S. owns a beautiful — and has a happy —. 4. One can build a very good — for $6000. 5. —s are built to live in, not to look on.

PARTY, PERSON. 6. There is another — coming on the evening train, but he will leave

II. A RESEMBLANCE IN SOUND MISLEADS.[25]

ACCEPTANCE, ACCEPTATION.—Acceptance is the “act of accepting”; also “favorable reception”: as, “The acceptance of a gift,” “She sang with marked acceptance.” Acceptation now means “the sense in which an expression is generally understood or accepted.”

Page 15

ACCESS, ACCESSION.—Access has several meanings authorized by good use: (1) outburst; (2) admission; (3) way of entrance. Accession means (1) the coming into possession of a right; or (2) an addition.

ACTS, ACTIONS.—“Acts, in the sense of ‘things done,’ is preferable to actions, since actions also means ‘processes of doing.’”[26]

ADVANCE, ADVANCEMENT.—Advance is used in speaking of something as moving forward; advancement, as being moved forward.

ALLUSION, ILLUSION, DELUSION.—An allusion is an indirect reference to something not definitely mentioned. Roughly speaking, an illusion is an error of vision; delusion, of judgment. “In literary and popular use an illusion is an unreal appearance presented in any way to the bodily or the mental vision; it is often pleasing, harmless, or even useful.... A delusion is a mental error or deception, and may have regard to things actually existing, as well as to illusions. Delusions are ordinarily repulsive and discreditable, and may even be mischievous.”[27]

AVOCATION, VOCATION.—“Vocation means ‘calling’ or ‘profession’; avocation, ‘something aside from one’s regular calling, a by-work.’”[28]

COMPLETION, COMPLETENESS.—Completion is “the act of completing”; completeness is “the state of being complete.”

OBSERVATION, OBSERVANCE.—Observation contains the idea of “looking at”; observance, of “keeping,” “celebrating.” “We speak of the observation of a fact, of a star; of the observance of a festival, of a rule.”[29]

PROPOSAL, PROPOSITION.—“A proposal is something proposed to be done, which may be accepted or rejected. A proposition is something proposed for discussion, with a view to determining the truth or wisdom of it.”[30]

RELATIONSHIP, RELATION.—Relationship properly means “the state of being related by kindred or alliance”: as, “A relationship existed between the two families.” Relation is a word of much broader meaning. It does not necessarily imply kinship.

SOLICITUDE, SOLICITATION.—Solicitude is “anxiety”; solicitation is “the act of soliciting or earnestly asking.”

STIMULATION, STIMULUS, STIMULANT.—Stimulation is “the act of stimulating or inciting to action”; stimulus, originally “a goad,” now denotes that which stimulates, the means by which one is incited to action; stimulant has a medical sense, being used of that which stimulates the body or any of its organs. We speak of ambition as a stimulus, of alcohol as a stimulant.

24. My old position offered no hope of ——. 25. His hopes of —— in England failing, Swift returned to Ireland.

ALLUSION, ILLUSION, DELUSION. 26. There were two ——s in his sermon to the riots. 27. The cleverest, acutest men are often under an (a) —— about women. 28. Longfellow's "Footsteps of Angels" contains ——s to the death of his wife.

29. Our judgment of people is liable to be warped by ——s of the imagination.

30. Those other words of —— and folly, Liberty first and Union afterward.

Page 17

AVOCATION, VOCATION.

31. Surgeons in the army are allowed by the enemy to pursue their —— unmolested.
32. The young lawyer, surrounded by his law-books, took up his —— with enthusiasm.
33. Let your base-ball be a pastime, not a trade; let it be your ——, not your ——.
34. Heaven is a pious man's ——, and therefore he counts earthly employments ——s.
35. It seems that after his return, his disciples left him and returned to their ordinary ——s.

COMPLETION, COMPLETENESS.

36. The —— of the railroad was celebrated by a general illumination in the village.
37. The comfort of passengers is secured by the —— of the equipment of the steamers of this line.
38. We hope for the —— of our new building by September.

SOLICITUDE, SOLICITATION. 51. He made frequent —— for money and clothes. 52. My mother watched over my infancy with tender ——.

53. Coriolanus yielded at the —— of his mother.

STIMULUS, STIMULANT, STIMULATION. 54. He worked hard under the —— of a desire to get rich. 55. The providential —— of conscience is always present. 56. The doctor came and administered a gentle —— to the patient.

III. ADDITIONAL NOUNS SOMETIMES MISUSED.[31]

ABILITY, CAPACITY.—Ability is the power of doing; capacity, the power of containing, of understanding, of acquiring.

ADHERENCE, ADHESION.—Adherence is used of moral relations, adhesion, of physical connection. We speak of the adhesion of glue to wood, of a man's adherence to the principles of his party.

AMOUNT, QUANTITY, NUMBER.—Amount means “sum total,” and is used of numbers or quantities; quantity is used of things which are measured; number, of things which are counted.

ARGUMENT, PLEA.—“Plea (in the legal sense) is properly used of the pleadings or the arraignment before a trial, not of the argument at a trial. A plea is always addressed to the court; an argument may be addressed either to the court or to the jury. A similar remark applies to the verbs plead and argue.”[32]

Page 18

BALANCE, REST, REMAINDER.—Balance, meaning “the difference between two sides of an account,” is a commercial term, and cannot properly be used for rest or remainder. Rest is used of persons or things, and of large as well as of small parts. Remainder is used only of things, and denotes a comparatively small part.

CENTRE, MIDDLE.—The centre is a point, or a definite place; the middle is a line, or a space, and is less definite than centre.

CHARACTER, REPUTATION.—Character is what a man is; reputation is the prevailing opinion of his character.

COMPLEMENT, COMPLIMENT.—A complement is a “full quantity or number” or “that which is needed to complete”; a compliment is “an expression of praise.”

CONSCIENCE, CONSCIOUSNESS.—Conscience is that within us which distinguishes right from wrong. Consciousness is the state of being aware of one’s existence, thoughts, and surroundings.

COUNCIL, COUNSEL.—A council is “a body of persons convened for consultation.” Counsel denotes “advice,” or “a person, as a lawyer, engaged to give advice.”

CUSTOM, HABIT.—Custom denotes the frequent repetition of the same act, and may be used of a number of persons taken together. Habit is the effect of custom in a person. Custom is voluntary; habit is involuntary, often uncontrollable, sometimes unconscious.

DECEPTION, DECEIT.—Deception is “the act of deceiving”; deceit is “deceitfulness,” a trait of character; or a “trick,” an “artifice.”

EGOISTS, EGOISM, EGOTISM.—“The disciples of Descartes were egoists, the ego being the basis of their philosophy.” Egoism is the name of their system. Egoism is sometimes used also in the sense of undue admiration of self, the outward expression of which is egotism. But “egotism, in the sense of ‘self-worship,’ is preferable to egoism, since egoism also designates a system of philosophy.”[33]

EMIGRATION, IMMIGRATION.—Emigration is the moving out from a country; immigration, the moving into it. Foreigners who come to live in America are emigrants from their fatherland, immigrants to America.

ENORMITY, ENORMOUSNESS.—“Enormity is used of deeds of unusual horror; enormousness, of things of unusual size. We speak of the enormity of CA[sar Borgia’s crimes, of the enormousness of the Rothschilds’ wealth.”[34]

ESTEEM, ESTIMATE, ESTIMATION.—Esteem as a noun seems to be going out of use; the word now commonly used in the sense of “opinion” or “regard” is estimation. An estimate is “an approximate judgment, based on considerations of probability, of the number, amount, magnitude, or position of anything.”

FALSITY, FALSENESS.—“Falsity, in the sense of ‘non-conformity to truth,’ without any suggestion of blame, is preferable to falseness, since falseness usually implies blame.”[35]

Page 19

IDENTITY, IDENTIFICATION.—Identity is “the state of being the same.” Identification denotes “the act of determining what a given thing, or who a given person, is.”

IMPORT, IMPORTANCE.—Import, in the sense of “meaning,” must be distinguished from importance, “the quality of being important.”

INVENTION, DISCOVERY.—We invent something new, contrived or produced for the first time. We discover what existed before, but remained unknown.

LIMIT, LIMITATION.—Limit, in the sense of “bound,” is preferable to limitation, since limitation also means “the act of limiting,” or a “restriction.”

LOT, NUMBER.—Lot denotes “a distinct part or parcel”: as, “The auctioneer sold the goods in ten lots.” The word does not mean “a great number”; therefore it is improperly used in the sentences: “He has lots of money,” and “I know a lot of people in New York.”

MAJORITY, PLURALITY.—A majority is more than half the whole number; a plurality is the excess of votes given for one candidate over those given for another, and is not necessarily a majority when there are more than two candidates.

NEGLIGENCE, NEGLECT.—“Negligence is used of a habit or trait; neglect, of an act or succession of acts.”[36]

NOVICE, NOVITIATE.—Novice properly means one who is new in any business or calling; novitiate, the state or time of being a novice.

ORGANISM, ORGANIZATION.—An organism is a “living body composed of a number of essential parts.” Organization denotes “the act of organizing,” or “an organized body of persons,” as a literary society.

PART, PORTION.—“Part is the general word for that which is less than the whole: as, the whole is equal to the sum of all its parts.... Portion is often used in a stilted way where part would be simpler and better; portion has always some suggestion of allotment or assignment: as, this is my portion; a portion of Scripture. ‘Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me.’”[37]

PLENTY, ABUNDANCE.—Plenty is enough; abundance, more than enough.

PRODUCE, PRODUCT, PRODUCTION.—Produce is always collective, and is used only of raw products: as, the produce of the soil, of the flock. Product denotes the result of some operation, usually physical labor. Production, meaning “the act of producing,” is also applied to a work of literature or art, as a book, a statue, or a painting. “Product, in the sense of ‘thing produced,’ is preferable to production, since production is also used in an abstract sense.”[38]

PROMINENCE, PREDOMINANCE.—Prominence means “a standing out from something, so as to be conspicuous.” Predominance denotes “ascendency,” “a superiority in strength or influence,” “an over-ruling.” There may be many prominent traits in a person’s character; there can be only one predominant trait.

RECEIPT, RECIPE.—“Receipt, in the sense of ‘formula for a pudding, etc.,’ is preferable to recipe, since recipe is commonly restricted to medical prescriptions.”[38]

RELATIVE, RELATION.—“Relative, in the sense of ‘member of a family,’ is preferable to relation, since relation is also used in an abstract sense.”[38]

REQUIREMENT, REQUISITE, REQUISITION.—A requirement is something required by a person or persons. A requisite is something required by the nature of the case. A requisition is an authoritative demand or official request for a supply of something.

RESORT, RECOURSE, RESOURCE.—Resort denotes “the act of going to some person or thing”; or “that which is resorted to or habitually visited.” Recourse means “resort for help or protection.” Resource denotes “something which is a source of help or support.”

SECRETING, SECRETION.—Secreting is the act of hiding; secretion, a physiological process or fluid.

SEWAGE, SEWERAGE.—Sewage means the contents, sewerage, the system, of sewers.

SITUATION, SITE.—“Situation embraces all the local aspects and relationships[39] in which a thing is placed. The site is confined to the ground on which it is erected or reposes.”[40]

SPECIALITY, SPECIALTY.—“Speciality, in the sense of ‘distinctive quality,’ is preferable to specialty, since specialty is also used in the sense of ‘distinctive thing.’”[41]

UNION, UNITY.—Union is “the joining of two or more things into one.” Unity means “oneness,” “harmony.”

VISITANT, VISITOR.—Visitant was formerly used to denote a supernatural being; visitor, a human one. Visitant seems now to be going out of use, visitor being used in both senses.

Illustrate by original sentences the correct use of these words:—

Home, party, series, statement, verdict, acception, actions, advance, advancement, avocation, completion, allusion, illusion, observation, observance, proposal, proposition, solicitude, solicitation, stimulus, stimulant, capacity, adherence, adhesion, amount, quantity, number, centre, middle, character, complement, compliment, conscience, consciousness, council, counsel, custom, habit, deception, deceit, egoist, emigration, immigration, enormity, enormousness, esteem, estimate, falsity, falseness, import, invention, discovery, limitation, majority, plurality, negligence, neglect, novitiate, organization, organism, produce, product, production, prominence, predominance, recipe, requirement, requisition, requisite, resort, resource, secretion, sewage, sewerage, situation, site, speciality, specialty, union, unity.

[45] TO THE TEACHER.—It is easy to underestimate the difficulty which this exercise presents to pupils. In assigning the lesson care must be taken not to call for more of this kind of work than can be done well. Constructing a sentence to illustrate the correct use of a word is a valuable exercise, but it is a difficult one; and persons who know the correct use of a word may be put to their wit's end to illustrate that use. It will be well to assign this exercise little by little, while the class works through the definitions and exercises on pages 23-41; or else to select from the list the words on which the class needs most drill. With some pupils it may be wise to omit the exercise entirely.

CHAPTER IV

OF PRONOUNS

POSSESSIVE FORMS.[46]—No apostrophe is used in forming the possessive case of personal pronouns. We write “ours,” “yours,” “hers,” “its,” “theirs.” “It’s” is a contraction for “it is.”

Page 27

[46] "Foundations," p. 60.

EXERCISE XXVI.

Write from dictation— 1. John's hat is old, yours is new. 2. The bear was lying on its side, dead. 3. The Browns' house is larger than ours, but ours is more convenient than theirs.

4. Yours very respectfully, John Smith. 5. See the yacht! it's coining into the harbor under full sail. 6. Show Mary your doll; it should not grieve you that yours is not so pretty as hers.

7. That fault was not yours. 8. Helen's eyes followed the direction of hers.

NOMINATIVE OR OBJECTIVE CASE.[47]—There are only seven words in the English language that now have different forms for the nominative and objective cases; therefore it is only in the use of these words that we need to observe any rules about "nominative" or "objective." Since, however, these seven words are more frequently used than any other words, the possibilities of error in choosing between the nominative and the objective are many. Mistakes of this kind are common, and produce a very unpleasant effect on cultivated people. The seven words that have different forms for the nominative and objective cases are the following pronouns[48]:—

Nominative. Objective.

I	me
we	us
thou	thee
he	him
she	her
they	them
who	whom

It is taken for granted that the student has already learned the following principles of syntax:—

1. Words used absolutely and the subjects of finite verbs should in English be put in the NOMINATIVE form.
2. The subjects of infinitives and the objects of verbs and prepositions should be in the OBJECTIVE form.
3. Words in apposition should be in the same case.
4. The verb "to be," or any of its forms (am, is, are, were, etc.), does not take an object, but, being equivalent in meaning to the symbol "=", takes the same case after it as before it: the nominative, if the form is "finite"; the objective, if the form is "infinitive" and has a subject of its own. “I know it is he,” “I know it to be him,” and “The stranger is thought to be he” are grammatically correct.

Sentences like “She invited Mrs. R. and I to go driving” are common, even among people generally well-informed. Such mistakes will be avoided if the speaker stops to think what the form would be if the pronoun were not coupled with a noun. No one would think of saying, “She invited I to go driving.”

Persons who are in doubt as to which form of the pronoun to use often try to avoid the difficulty by using one of the pronouns ending in “-self”—pronouns which have the same form for both the nominative and the objective case. Thus many persons, uncertain whether to use “I” or “me” in the sentence quoted above, would say instead, “She invited Mrs. R. and myself to go driving.” This is no better than “Mrs. R. and I,” or “her and I.” The pronouns in “-self” are properly used only for emphasis or in a reflexive sense.[49] It is right to say: “I will go myself”; “Carrie herself went to the door”; “God helps those who help themselves.” It would be wrong to say, “Harry and myself have bought a horse together.”

When a pronoun in “-self” is used reflexively, it refers to the subject of the clause in which it stands.

In sentences like “This advice is free to whoever will take it,” the word ending in “-ever” is the subject of the verb “will take,” not the object of the preposition “to.” The right form, therefore, is “whoever,” not “whomever.” The object or, better, the “base” of the preposition “to” is the whole clause, “whoever will take it.”

[47] Ibid., pp. 61-62. [48] I omit ye, you, because they are used interchangeably. I omit also compounds of who, whom. [49] “Foundations,” p. 64.

EXERCISE XXVII.

Insert the proper form of pronoun in each blank, and give the reason for your choice:—

I

- I, ME, MYSELF. 1. Taking a carriage, my brother and—drove to the east end of Cape Elizabeth.

PRONOUNS BEFORE VERBAL NOUNS.[52]—Grammarians distinguish three kinds of words formed from verbs by the adding of “-ing.”

1. “We found Katharine singing a merry song.” In this sentence “singing”—equivalent to “who was singing”—describes Katharine, and is therefore used as an adjective; but it also partakes of the nature of a verb, for it has a direct object, “song.” Such words, partaking of the nature of both adjective and verb, are called PARTICIPLES.
2. “Blithely singing pretty songs keeps one’s spirits up.”

Here “singing” is a noun, the subject of the sentence; yet it has a direct object, “songs,” and is modified by the adverb “blithely.” Such words, partaking of the nature of both noun and verb, are called GERUNDS.

A noun or a pronoun used before a gerund to denote the subject of the action should be put in the possessive case. The reason for this becomes evident if, in the sentence “Do you remember Katharine (Katharine’s) singing?” we substitute for the noun “singing” another noun, “song;” thus, “Do you remember Katharine (Katharine’s) song?” The direct object of “remember” is “singing,” which is described by the possessive “Katharine’s.”

3. “Katharine’s blithe singing of merry songs helps to make home happy.” Here, too, “singing” is a noun; but now its verbal character has disappeared, for it is modified by an adjective “blithe,” and instead of a direct object we have the prepositional phrase “of merry songs.” Such words derived from verbs are ABSTRACT VERBAL NOUNS.

When a word in “-ing” is modified by “the” or some other adjective, it is an abstract verbal noun, and cannot have an object. Conversely, if it, is followed by “of” and a noun instead of by a direct object, it should be modified by “the” or some other adjective.

[51] In the first of these sentences the pronoun to be supplied is the subject of “is honest,” and “I know” is parenthetical. In the second sentence, the pronoun to be supplied is the subject of “to be honest,” which is the complement of “I know.” [52] “Foundations,” pp. 62-64.

EXERCISE XXVIII.

Which of the following forms is preferable? Give the reason:—

1. I heard of him (his) coming home. 2. What do you think of Marguerite (Marguerite's) studying Latin? 3. Have you any doubt of Kathleen (Kathleen's) being happy? 4. 12. Look at him (his) reading a book. 13. The delay was caused by us (our) missing the train. 14. I found him (his) reading Idyls of the King. 15. This may lead to Harry (Harry's) getting a position. 16. We did not see the house (house's) burning. 17. You (your) writing the letter so neatly secured for you the position. 18. The man's (man) breaking jail is evidence of his guilt. 19. What do you think about this cloth (cloth's) wearing well? 20. We must insist upon every man (man's) doing his duty. 21. Mr. R.'s (Mr. R.) having come to town will soon be known. 22. There is prospect of the Senate (Senate's) passing the tariff bill. 23. What use is there in a man (man's) swearing? 24. His parents are opposed to him (his) playing football. 25. No one ever saw fat men (men's) heading a riot. 26. A fierce struggle ensued, ending in the intruder (intruder's) being worsted.

27. Professor C. relies on us (our) passing our examinations. 28. I felt my heart (heart's) beating faster. 29. There is no use in me (my) trying to learn Hebrew. 30. I enjoy nothing more than the sight of a yacht (yacht's) sailing in a stiff breeze.

31. Brown (Brown's) being a manufacturer prevented his election.

EXERCISE XXIX.

Distinguish in meaning between the following sentences:—

1. The man (man's) asking to be allowed to vote started a quarrel. 2. Did you see him (his) riding? 3. I had to laugh at John (John's) riding a bicycle. 4. Think of me (my) eating frogs' legs. 5. Much depends on the teacher (teacher's) correcting the papers.

6. Did you watch him (his) entering the room? 7. Did you hear Ruth (Ruth's) singing?
8. No one ever heard of that man (man's) running for office.

EXERCISE XXX.

Explain the faults in the following sentences and correct them in several ways:—

1. He read the parable about the sowing the seed. 2. Good writing depends on reading of good books. 3. Youth is the time for the forming the character. 4. "In building of chaises, I tell you what,

There is always somewhere a weakest spot."

5. He would not aid me so much as by the lifting a hand. 6. Groaning of prisoners and clanking of chains were heard. 7. By the obtaining wisdom you will command esteem.

8. By reading of good books his style was improved. 9. The taking things by force is apt to make trouble. 10. A more careful guarding the prisoners would have prevented this accident.

CHOICE OF RELATIVE PRONOUNS.[53]—Who is now used only of persons; which, of things; that, of either persons or things. As a rule, euphony decides between who or which and that.

"Who is used chiefly of persons (though also often of the higher animals), which almost only of animals and things (in old English also of persons), and that indifferently of either, except after a preposition, where only who [whom] or which can stand. Some recent authorities teach that only that should be used when the relative clause is limiting or defining: as, the man that runs fastest wins the race; but who or which when it is descriptive or co-ordinating: as, this man, who ran fastest, won the race; but, though present usage is perhaps tending in the direction of such a distinction, it neither has been nor is a rule of English speech, nor is it likely to become one, especially on account of the impossibility of setting that after a preposition; for to turn all relative clauses into the form 'the house that Jack lived in' (instead of 'the house in which Jack lived') would be intolerable. In good punctuation the defining relative is distinguished (as in the examples above) by never taking a comma before it, whether it be who or which or that. Wherever that could be properly used, but only there, the relative may be, and very often is, omitted altogether; thus, the house Jack built or lived in; the man he built it for." [54]

When the antecedent includes both persons and things, that is preferable to who or which.

"When the antecedent is a neuter noun not personified, a writer should prefer of which to whose, unless euphony requires the latter." [55]

What, as a relative pronoun, is equivalent to "that which." It is never used with an antecedent, since the antecedent is included in the meaning of the word.

The word as is a relative pronoun only after "such" or "same." After "such" the proper relative is "as"; after "same" it is "as" or "that." "Same as usually expresses identity of kind, same that absolute identity, except in contracted sentences where same as is alone found: cf. 'he uses the same books as you do,' 'he uses the same books that you do,' he uses the same books as you.'"[56]

To such —— trust her faithfulness.”

36. Is this a dagger —— I see before me? 37. We saw the men and arms —— were captured.

EITHER or ANY ONE, NEITHER or NO ONE.[58]—Either means “one of the two”; neither, “no one of the two.” When more than two persons or things are spoken of, “any one” is preferable to “either,” and “no one” to “neither.”

[57] See note, p. 45. [58] "Foundations," pp. 69-70.

EXERCISE XXXII.

Insert the proper word or words ("either," "neither," "any one," "no one") in each blank in the following sentences:—

1. Only three persons saw the fight, and —— of them would testify.
2. Has —— of you two gentlemen a fountain-pen?
3. I defy any candid and clear thinker to deny in the name of inductive science —— of these six propositions.
4. When two persons disagree, it is not likely that —— is altogether wrong.
5. Has —— of you who have just come from the ball-field seen Julian?
6. I have several histories of France, —— of which will give you the information.
7. Here come Harry and Arthur; —— will go to get it for you.
8. Give it to the six successful students or to —— of them.

EACH or ALL.[59]—Each denotes every one of any number taken one by one; all denotes the entire number taken together.

[59] "Foundations," p. 70.

EXERCISE XXXIII.

Insert the proper word ("each," "all") in each blank:—

1. —— gave me his (their) hand(s).
2. —— of the workmen received two dollars a day.
3. —— of the children has (have) his (their) peculiar traits.
4. —— of the members is (are) entitled to a vote.
5. He gave an apple to —— of us.
6. Did your father bring the boat to Harry? No, he brought it to —— of us.
7. —— of them did his (their) duty.

CHANGE OF PRONOUN.[60]—In referring to the same person or thing a writer should not change from one pronoun to another.

The possessive of "one" is "one's" (not "his"), except in such expressions as "every one," "no one," "many a one." The reflexive is "one's self."

It is a common but serious fault to begin to write in the third person, and then to change to the first or second.

[60] Ibid., pp. 72-74.

EXERCISE XXXIV.

Fill the blanks with the proper pronouns:—

1. The Second Regiment of the National Guard, —— was sent to Pittsburg during the strike, and —— is now in camp at Gettysburg, has six hundred members.

6. "Ere you remark another's sin, Bid —— conscience look within."
7. At first one is likely to wonder where the boats are, since on entering the grove —— is (are) able to see only a small cabin.

Page 36

8. Dost —— talk of revenge? —— conscience, it seems, has grown dull.
9. As a Christian —— art obliged to forgive —— enemy.
10. Did you never bear false witness against —— neighbor?
11. The shepherd ran after a sheep and caught —— just as —— was jumping over a hedge.
12. The hen gathered —— brood under —— wing.
13. This is a book which I have never read, but one —— is recommended by Mrs. M.

EXERCISE XXXV.

1. Write the following note in clear and correct form, using the third person:—

“Mr. Smith presents his compliments to Mr. Jones, and finds he has a cap which isn’t mine. So, if you have a cap which isn’t his, no doubt they are the ones.”[61]

2. Write a formal note in the third person, asking an acquaintance to dine with you at a certain hour in order that you may consult with him about some matter of importance.
3. Write a note in the third person accepting or declining this invitation.
4. Write a formal note in the third person to some gentleman to whom you have a letter of introduction, asking when it will be convenient to have you call.
5. Write a notice in the third person offering a reward for the recovery of a lost article.

SINGULAR or PLURAL PRONOUNS.[62]—The rule that a pronoun should be in the same number as its antecedent is violated most commonly in connection with such expressions as “any one,” “each,” “either,” “every,” “man after man,” “neither,” “nobody.” Grammatically such expressions are singular.

“He” (“his,” “him”) may stand for mankind in general and include women as well as men.

[61] Quoted in “Foundations,” p. 74. [62] “Foundations,” pp. 75-76.

EXERCISE XXXVI.

Fill the blanks with the proper pronouns:—

1. Many a brave man met —— death in the war.

46. Everybody's heart is open, you know, when — has (have) recently escaped from severe pain.

OMITTED PRONOUNS.[63]—The omission of necessary pronouns—an omission especially common in business letters—cannot be justified on the ground of brevity.

[63] "Foundations," pp. 77, 78.

EXERCISE XXXVII.

Insert the omitted pronouns in—

1. After twenty-two years' experience announce the opening of my new store. Hope to serve the public better by presenting new ideas. Would invite inspection.
2. Have received manuscript, but not had time to examine. Will take up in a few days. If good, will publish.
3. Dr. Jones and wife occupy the front room. 4. My inability to get employment, and destitute condition, depressed me. 5. She didn't trouble to make any excuse to her husband. 6. Accept thanks for lovely present. Hope we may have the pleasure of using together in the near future.

Page 38

REDUNDANT PRONOUNS.—A vulgarism not often seen in writing, but common in conversation, consists in the use of an unnecessary pronoun after the subject of a sentence. Thus,

Teacher: Who was Benjamin Franklin?

Pupil: Benjamin Franklin, he was a great American philosopher and statesman.

CHAPTER V.

OF VERBS

CORRECT and INCORRECT FORMS.[64]—It is not enough to learn by heart the “principal parts” of a verb; the habit of using them correctly should be acquired. The following verb-forms are often misused:—

Present. Past Indicative. Past Participle.

awake (intransitive)	awoke	awaked
begin	began	begun
beseech	besought	besought
blow	blew	blown
bid ("to order," "to greet")	bAefde	bidden or bid
bid (at auction)	bid	bidden or bid
break	broke	broken[65]
burst	burst	burst
choose	chose	chosen
come	came	come
dive	dived	dived
do	did	done
drive	drove	driven
eat	ate	eaten
flee	fled	fled
fly	flew	flown
freeze	froze	frozen
forget	forgot	forgotten
get	got	got[66]
go	went	gone
hang	hung, hanged[67]	hung, hanged[67]
lay ("to cause to lie")	laid	laid
lie ("to recline")	lay	lain
plead	pleaded	pleaded

prove	proved	proved[68]
ride	rode	ridden
rise (intransitive)	rose	risen
raise (transitive)	raised	raised
run	ran	run
see	saw	seen
set ("to put"; of the sun, set moon, etc. , "to sink")		set
sit	sat	sat
shake	shook	shaken
shoe	shod	shod
show	showed	shown
speak	spoke	spoken
slay	slew	slain
steal	stole	stolen
take	took	taken
throw	threw	thrown
wake (transitive)	woke	waked
write	wrote	written

In using the verbs drink, ring, shrink, sing, sink, spring, swim, it seems better to confine the forms in "a" to the preterite tense, and the forms in "u" to the past participle: as, "The bell rang five minutes ago"; "Yes, the bell has rung."[69]

Page 39

The following forms also should be distinguished:—

Present. Past. Participle.

alight ("to get down from," alighted alighted
"to dismount")

light ("to ignite," lighted[7] lighted[70]
"to shed light on") light ("to settle down as lighted or lit lighted or lit a bird from flight," or

"to come upon by chance")

[64] "Foundations," pp.78-81, 91-93. [65] "Broke," as a form of the past participle, is still found in verse. [66] "Gotten" is an old form not sanctioned by the best modern usage. [67] "Clothes are 'hung' on the line; men are 'hanged' on the gallows."—"Foundations," p. 79. [68] "'Proven' is borrowed from the Scotch legal dialect."—"Foundations," p.92 [69] Ibid., p. 91. [70] "'Lighted' seems preferable to 'lit'; but 'lit' is used by some writers of reputation."—Ibid., p. 92.

EXERCISE XLI.

Illustrate by original sentences the proper use of the past indicative and the past participle of each of the following verbs, thus: A swallow FLEW into my room, but before I recovered from my surprise it had FLOWN out again. Give to the sentences variety:—

Awake, beat, begin, beseech, blow, bid (to order), bid (to offer), break, burst, choose, come, dive, do, drive, eat, flee, fly, flow, forget, freeze, get, go, hang, lay, lie (to recline), plead, prove, ride, rise, run, see, set, sit, shake, shoe, show, speak, slay, steal, take, throw, wake, write.

CONTRACTIONS.[71]—Some writers hold that in careful writing contracted forms should be avoided; but all are agreed that in conversation some contractions, if correctly used, are natural and proper. The conversation of a person who never said “can’t” for “can not,” “don’t” for “do not,” or “doesn’t” for “does not,” would seem stiff. Care should, however, be taken not to use plural contractions for singular, or singular for plural. Don’t is a contraction of “do not,” doesn’t of “does not.” The proper contraction of “is not” is isn’t; of “are not,” aren’t. Daresn’t, if used at all, should be used only when “dares not” might be substituted. Ain’t is a gross vulgarism.

[71] “Foundations,” pp. 81-82.

EXERCISE XLII.

Insert the proper contraction (doesn’t, don’t) in each of the blank places:—

Page 44

1. It— seem possible. 2. The captain— know what it is to be afraid. 3. John says he — understand the problem on page 266. 4. Why— she come? 5.— it seem strange that they— come? 6. Waldo— improve in penmanship as fast as he should. 7. It— look like pure water. 8. Why— he answer? 9. The boy will fail, but he— seem to care much.

MAY (MIGHT) or CAN (COULD).[72]—Can and could, which denote “ability” or “possibility,” are often wrongly used in the place of may and might, which are the proper words to denote “permission.”

[72] Ibid., pp. 82-83.

EXERCISE XLIII.

Fill the blanks with the right words:—

1. — I leave the room? 2. You — go to the concert, but I doubt whether you — get a seat. 3. — we by searching find out God? 4. — I have some more lemonade? 5. — I have another piece of cake? 6. — you tell me which is Mr. Ames’s house? 7. Mother says I—invite the girls to tea. 8. A man who knows himself to be right — afford to await the judgment of posterity. 9. — I write at your desk? 10. You — come to see me whenever you — find time. 11. They asked whether they — have a holiday. 12. They were wondering whether they — be recognized in their disguises. 13. — I have the use of your sled? 14. — I trouble you to get me a glass of water?

WILL OR SHALL.[73]—Some grammarians teach that the future tense of “go” is: “I shall or will go,” “You shall or will go,” “He shall or will go,” etc. The fact seems to be that there is only one form for the future; the other form, often given as an alternative, expresses something more than futurity, and is somewhat like a distinct mode.

A help to the proper use of shall and will is found in the original meaning of the words. At first shall and will were notional verbs,[74] shall meaning “to owe,” “to be obliged,” and will meaning “to wish:” as, “That faith I shall (owe) to God.”[75] At present shall and will often retain some trace of their original meaning, will implying a reference to the will of the subject, and shall implying obligation or compulsion: as, “I will follow him to the end;” “He shall be brought to justice;” sometimes they are mere auxiliaries, with no trace of their original meaning: as, “It will rain to-day;” “I shall be glad.”

[73] “Foundations,” pp. 83-88. [74] By “notional verb” is meant a verb that has some distinct idea or notion of its own: as, “I have a ball.” Here “have” expresses the idea of possession. In the sentence “I have lost my ball,” the word “have” does not express a distinct idea; it only helps to form a tense of the verb “lose”: that is, it is not notional, but auxiliary. [75] Chaucer.

Page 45

For practical purposes the distinction between shall and will may be exhibited as follows:—

I. IN INDEPENDENT SENTENCES.

Simple Futurity. Volition, implying that the matter is within the control of the speaker.

I (we) shall \ I (we) will \ you will[76] } go. you shall } go.
 he (they) will he (they) shall[77]/

[76] Sometimes used in a courteous command to a subordinate officer. [77] Also used in speaking of what is destined to take place, or of what is willed by some ruling power.

II. IN DEPENDENT SENTENCES.

In noun clauses introduced by “that,” expressed or understood, if the noun clause and the principal clause have different subjects, the distinction between shall and will is the same as in independent sentences: as,

My sister says (that) Dorothy will be glad to go with us. (Futurity; the same as, “Dorothy will be glad to go with us.”)

My sister says (that) Dorothy shall not be left behind. (Volition; the same as, “Dorothy shall not be left behind.”)

In all other dependent clauses, shall is in all persons the proper auxiliary to express simple futurity; will in all persons implies an exercise of will on the part of the subject of the clause: as,

Dorothy says (that) she shall (futurity) be able to go with us. She says (that) she will (volition) meet us at the corner. If Bessie will come (volition), we will try to make her visit pleasant. When He shall appear (futurity) we shall be like Him.

REMARK.—It is worthy of notice that in noun clauses introduced by “that”—clauses which are really indirect quotations—the same auxiliary is generally used that would be used were the quotation in the direct form: as, “My sister says, ‘Dorothy will be glad to go with you,’” “My sister says that Dorothy will be glad to go with us;” “Dorothy says, ‘I shall be glad to go with you,’” “Dorothy says that she shall be glad to go with us.” This remark, however, is not an adequate statement of the best usage, for it is not true of such sentences as 21, p. 76, and 8, 22, p. 77.

III. IN QUESTIONS.

In the first person “will” is never proper, except when it repeats a question asked by another person. “Will I go?” would mean, “Is it my intention to go?”—a useless question, since the speaker must know his own will without asking.

In the second and third persons the auxiliary which is expected in the answer should be used.

Will you dine with me to-morrow? I will. (Volition.) Shall you be glad to come? I shall. (Futurity.) Will your brother be there, too? He will. (Futurity.)

Page 46

WOULD OR SHOULD.[78]—“Should and would follow the same rules as shall and will, but they have in addition certain meanings peculiarly their own.

“Should is sometimes used in its original sense of ‘ought,’ as in ‘You should not do that.’

“Would is sometimes used to signify habitual action, as in ‘The ‘Squire would sometimes fall asleep in the most pathetic part of my sermon;’ and to express a wish, as, ‘Would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!’”[79]

[78] “Foundations,” pp. 88-90. [79] A.S. Hill: Principles of Rhetoric, revised edition, p 63.

QUESTIONS OF TENSE.[80]—The tense of a verb should correctly express the time referred to. Most errors in the use of tenses are violations of some one of the following principles, which are established by good usage:—

1. Principal verbs referring to the same time should be in the same tense.
2. The perfect indicative represents something as now completed—as begun in the past but continuing till the present, at least in its consequences: as, “I have lost my book” (so that now I do not have it); “This house has stood for ninety years” (it is still standing); “Bishop Brooks has died, but he has left us his example” (he is not now among us, but we have his example).
3. The tense of the verb in a dependent clause varies with the tense of the principal verb:[81] as,
 I know he will come.
 I knew he would come.
 I have taken the first train, that I may arrive early.
 I had taken the first train, that I might arrive early.
 Blanche will be frightened if she sees the bat.
 Blanche would be frightened if she saw the bat.
 Blanche would have been frightened if she had seen the bat.
 Present facts and unchangeable truths, however, should be expressed in the present tense, regardless of the tense of the principal verb: as,
 “What did you say his name is?”
4. The perfect infinitive is properly used to denote action which is completed at the time denoted by the principal verb: as, “I am glad to have seen Niagara Falls;” “He felt sorry to have hurt your feelings.”

EXCEPTION.—Ought, must, need, and should (in the sense of “ought”) have no distinctive form to denote past time; with these verbs present time is denoted by putting the complementary infinitive in the present tense, past time is denoted by putting the complementary infinitive in the perfect tense: as, “You ought to go,” “You ought to have gone;" "He should be careful," "He should have been careful." A similar change from the present to the perfect infinitive is found after could and might in some of their uses: as, "I could go," "I could have gone;" "You might have answered."

INDICATIVE OR SUBJUNCTIVE.[82]—The modern tendency to drop the subjunctive is unfortunate, for the distinction between the subjunctive and the indicative is too useful to be abandoned.[83] A knowledge of the difference between these modes in English is especially important in view of the difficulty which pupils complain of in mastering the uses of the Latin subjunctive or the Greek subjunctive and optative.[84] For these reasons more space is given to the subjunctive in this book than would be called for by a mere discussion of modern English usage.

FORMS of the SUBJUNCTIVE—In form the English subjunctive differs from the indicative in several ways:—

1. In the single case of the verb to be there are distinct forms for the present and past tenses, namely:—

Present.

I, we \ thou, you } be.
he, they/

Past

I were, we \ thou wert, you } were.
he were, they/

EXAMPLES.—“See that my room be[85] got ready at once.” “I will work you a banner if you be[85] victorious.” “The headsman feels if the axe be[85] sharp.” “Take care lest you be deceived.” “Judge not that ye be not judged.” “I will beard them, though they be[85] more fanged than wolves and bears.” “If I were you, I would not say that.” “If you were more studious, you would rank high.” “Would that my parents were here!”

Page 52

2. In other verbs the subjunctive form is distinguishable from the indicative in the second and third persons singular by the absence of the personal endings -th, -s, or -st: as,

Present Indicative: I have, thou hast, he has (hath).

Subjunctive: I have, thou have, he have.

Past Indicative: I had, thou hadst, he had.

Subjunctive: I had, thou had, he had.

Present Indicative: I come, thou comest, he comes (cometh).

Subjunctive: I come, thou come, he come.

Past Indicative: I came, thou earnest, he came.

Subjunctive: I came, thou came, he came.

[82] "Foundations," pp. 98-101. [83] "Some people seem to think that the subjunctive mood is as good as lost, that it is doomed, and that its retention is hopeless. If its function were generally appreciated, it might even now be saved.... If we lose the Subjunctive Verb, it will certainly be a grievous impoverishment to our literary language, were it only for its value in giving variation to diction—and I make bold to assert that the writer who helps to keep it up deserves public gratitude."—John Earle: English Prose, its Elements, History, and Usage, p. 172. [84] "The lecturer also put in a plea for more vitality in the teaching of English, which ought to be made the gate to other languages. Many of the difficult questions of Latin syntax might be examined in the field of English, if only we were careful to treat our English critically. Whereas most grammars cut the ground from under them by denying the existence of a Subjunctive Mood. Until teachers recognize generally that, in such a sentence as 'If he had done it, it had been better,' we have a Subjunctive in both clauses, and a sentence essentially different from 'If he had loved her before, he now adored her,' English must forfeit half its value, both as a mental discipline and as a means of approach to Latin, Greek, and German."—From a report of a Lecture by Prof. Sonnenschein, of the Mason College, quoted in Earle's "English Prose," p. 55. [85] In such sentences the indicative would be, according to modern usage, correct, and it is more common.

EXAMPLES.—"Long live the king!" "If thou go, see that thou offend not." "It is better he die." "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him." "Unless he behave[86] better, he will be punished." "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?" "Govern well thy appetite, lest sin surprise thee." "If my sister saw this snake, she would be frightened." "I wish I knew where Charles is."

The perfect and pluperfect subjunctives are of course formed by means of the subjunctive present and past tenses of "have."

3. Very often, instead of the simple subjunctive forms, we use auxiliary verbs—may (past, might) and would or should—to express the subjunctive idea. “May” (“might”) is common as an equivalent for the subjunctive mode in clauses denoting a purpose, a wish, a hope, or a fear: as, “Bring him the book, that he may read to us;” “May he rest in peace;” “I hope you may succeed;” “They were afraid we might lose the way.” “Would” and “should” are common substitutes for all tenses of the subjunctive: as, “Walk carefully lest you (stumble) should stumble;” “If he (come) should come, he will find me at home;” “It (were) would be better if he (went) should go alone;” “If my sister had seen this mouse, she (had been) would have been frightened.” In these sentences either the form in parenthesis or the italicized form is correct, though the latter is more common.

NOTE.—It does not follow that the verbs “may,” “would,” and “should” always express the subjunctive idea. In the following sentences, for instance, they express the indicative idea: “You may (i.e., are permitted to) stay an hour;” “You should (i.e., ought to) be punctual;” “Edith would not (i.e., was unwilling to) come.” In such sentences “may,” “should,” and “would” make simple statements of fact.

USES of the SUBJUNCTIVE.—The indicative form is used in expressing a fact or what is assumed to be a fact: as “He thinks he is ill;” the subjunctive form indicates some uncertainty or doubt in the speaker’s mind: as, “Whether it rain or not, I will go.”

The subjunctive idea occurs most frequently, perhaps, in conditional sentences. A conditional sentence is one that contains a condition or supposition. A supposition may refer to present, past, or future time. If it refers to present or past time, it may be viewed by the speaker as true, untrue, or as a mere supposition with nothing implied as to its truth; if it refers to the future, it may be viewed as either likely or unlikely. A supposition which is assumed to be true, or which is made without any hint as to its correctness, is expressed by the indicative. A supposition which is viewed by the speaker as untrue or unlikely is expressed by the subjunctive or a phrase for the subjunctive. When the character of the supposition makes the conclusion untrue or unlikely, the conclusion also is expressed by the subjunctive or a phrase for the subjunctive. The use of tenses is peculiar, as will be seen from the following table of a few common forms of conditional sentences. The tenses should be carefully noted:—

PRESENT: If it rains (is raining) now, I am sorry. Present indicative: A simple supposition without any hint as to its correctness.

If it rained (were raining), I should be sorry.

Past subjunctive, both clauses: The speaker implies that it is not raining.

Page 54

PAST:

If it rained (was raining), I was sorry.

Past indicative: No suggestion of doubt.

If it had rained, I should have been sorry.

Past perfect subjunctive, both clauses: The speaker implies that it did not rain.

FUTURE: If it rains, I shall be sorry. Present indicative: The common, though inexact, form of a simple future supposition.

If it rain, I shall be sorry.

Present subjunctive: Less common, but more exact. The future is uncertain.

If it should (were to) rain, I should be sorry. Subjunctive, both clauses: The uncertainty is emphasized by the auxiliary form; the chances of rain seem more remote.

NOTE 1.—When if is equivalent to “whenever”, the condition is called “general”, to distinguish it from “particular” conditions, which refer to some particular act at some particular time. General conditions always take the indicative: as, “If (whenever) it rains, I stay at home.”

NOTE 2.—Sometimes there is no “if”, and then the verb or a part of the verb precedes the subject: as, “Were it raining, I should be sorry;” “Had it been raining, I should have been sorry.”

NOTE 3.—In such sentences as “If thou hadst been here, my brother had not died,” it may perhaps be questioned whether “had not died” is indicative, as in the Greek, or subjunctive, as in the Latin, idiom.

NOTE 4.—Clauses introduced by though and unless take the same forms as clauses introduced by if.

Wishes are naturally expressed in the subjunctive. The present subjunctive denotes a wish for the future: as, “Thy kingdom come.” The past subjunctive denotes a wish for the present which is unfulfilled: as, “I wish I were a bird.” The past perfect subjunctive denotes a wish contrary to a past fact: as, “I wish you had been there.”

[86] In such sentences the indicative would be, according to modern usage, correct, and it is more common. [87] See paragraph 3, page 84. The forms in “would” and “should” in conditional sentences, though they express the subjunctive idea, can hardly be called the “subjunctive mood”. Sometimes they are called the “conditional mood.”

EXERCISE L.

Tell the time referred to in each of the following sentences, and whether the speaker regards the condition as true, untrue, or uncertain:—

Page 55

1. If all men did their duty, there would be less misery in the world. 2. Had I heard of the affair sooner, this misfortune would not have happened.

Haven, he may find the city just as I have described it.

SINGULAR or PLURAL.[88]—The following principles, established by good usage, writers or speakers are liable to forget:—

Page 57

1. The expressions each, every, many a, either, and neither are singular.
2. When the subject consists of singular nouns or pronouns connected by or, either—or, or neither—nor, the verb must be singular.
3. Words joined to the subject by with, together with, in addition to, or as well as, are not a part of the grammatical subject, but are parenthetical, and therefore do not affect the number of the verb.
4. Since a relative pronoun has the number and person of its antecedent, a verb whose subject is a relative pronoun agrees in person and number with the antecedent of the relative.
5. "When the subject though plural in form is singular in sense, the verb should be singular; when the subject though singular in form is plural in sense, the verb should be plural:"[89] as, "'Gulliver's Travels' was written by Swift;" "Five hundred dollars is a large sum;" "Half of them are gone."
6. "A collective noun, when it refers to the collection as a whole, is singular in sense, and therefore requires a singular verb; when it refers to the individual persons or things of the collection, it is plural and requires a plural verb."[90]

MISUSED VERBS.—See the remarks under “Misused Nouns.”

I. A RESEMBLANCE IN SOUND MISLEADS.

ACCREDIT, CREDIT.—‘To accredit means ‘to invest with credit or authority,’[91] or ‘to send with letters credential;’ to credit means ‘to believe,’[92] or “to put to the credit of.”

ARISE, RISE.—“The choice between these words was primarily, and still often is, a matter of rhythm [euphony]. The literal meanings, however, or those which seem literal, have become more associated with rise, and the consciously figurative with arise: as, he rose from the chair; the sun rose; the provinces rose in revolt: trouble arose; ‘music arose with its voluptuous swell.’”[93]

CAPTIVATE, CAPTURE.—To captivate means “to fascinate”; to capture, “to take prisoner.”

DEPRECIATE, DEPRECATE.—To depreciate means “to bring down in value,” “to disparage;” to deprecate means “to argue earnestly against” or “to express regret for.”

IMPUGN, IMPUTE.—To impugn means “to call in question;” to impute means “to ascribe to.”

Loan, lend.—The use of loan as a verb is not sanctioned by good use. Properly the word is a noun. A loan is money which a person lends.

IMPUGN, IMPUTE. 23. We cannot deny the conclusion of a proposition of Euclid without—ing the axioms which are the basis of its demonstration. 24. The gentleman—s my honesty. 25. The power of fortune is confessed only by the miserable, for the happy—all their success to prudence and merit. 26. Mr.X. is uncharitable; he always—s bad motives.

II. A RESEMBLANCE IN SENSE MISLEADS.[94]

ANTAGONIZE, OPPOSE.—To antagonize means properly “to struggle against,” “to oppose actively,” or “to counteract.” “In England, antagonizing forces must be of the same kind, but in the political phraseology of the United States a person may antagonize (i.e., oppose) a measure.”[95]

CALCULATE, INTEND.—To calculate means properly “to compute mathematically,” or “to adjust or adapt” for something. In the sense of intend it is not in good use.

CARRY, BRING, FETCH.—To carry means “to take along in going;” to bring means “to take along in coming;” to fetch means “to go, get, and bring.”

CHAMPION, SUPPORT.—The word champion is very much overworked, being often used in the general sense of “support.” It should be restricted to cases in which there is the idea of entering the lists as champion of a cause.

CLAIM, ASSERT, ALLEGE, MAINTAIN, DECLARE, AFFIRM, STATE.—To claim means properly “to demand as one’s own or one’s due.” It is often loosely used, especially in the United States, for “assert,” “allege,” “maintain,” “declare,” or “affirm.” To assert is “to say or declare in the face of implied denial or doubt.” To allege is “to assert without proof.” To maintain is “to uphold by argument.” To declare is “to say publicly, clearly, or emphatically.” To affirm is “to assert on one’s reputation for knowledge or truthfulness.” To state, which is also often misused in the sense of “say,” “assert,” “allege,” “declare,” or “affirm,” means properly “to express formally and in detail;” it always implies detail. (See “Foundations,” pp. 113, 114, and “Practical Exercises,” p. 99.)

CONFESS, ADMIT.—“Admit, in cases into which the idea of confession does not enter, is preferable to confess. On grounds of idiom, however, ‘I must confess’ and the parenthetical ‘I confess’ are exempt from the operation of this rule.”[96]

DEMAND, ASK.—To demand means “to ask for with authority or with insistence.” The use of “demand” in the sense of “ask” is borrowed, possibly, from the French use of demander.

HIRE, LET, LEASE.—To hire means “to obtain the use of;” to let, “to give the use of.” To lease means “to give the use of by lease.” The owner of a house leases it; the person who occupies it takes a lease of it.

LEARN, TEACH.—Learn means to “acquire” knowledge, not to “impart” it. In the latter sense the proper word is teach.

“I have more information to-day than I had before,” said Mr. Sheehan.

“This has learned you something,” said Mr. Goff.

“Oh no,” replied Mr. Sheehan, “it has taught me something.”[97]

LIKE, LOVE.—Like and love differ greatly in strength or warmth, and may differ in kind. Like may be feeble and cool, and it never has the intensity of love. We may like or even love a person; we only like the most palatable kind of food. With an infinitive, like is the common word, love being appropriate only in the hyperbole of poetical or rhetorical feeling.[98]

MATERIALIZE, APPEAR.—To materialize properly means “to make or to become physically perceptible;” as, “by means of letters we materialize our ideas and make them as lasting as ink and paper;” “the ideas of the sculptor materialize in marble.”

PLEAD, ARGUE.—See plea, argument, p. 29.

STAY, STOP.—“Stay, as in ‘At what hotel are you staying?’ is preferable to stop, since stop also means ‘to stop without staying.’”[99]

TRANSPIRE, HAPPEN.—To transpire means properly “to escape from secrecy to notice,” “to leak out;” it should not be used in the sense of to happen.

III. ADDITIONAL MISUSED VERBS.[101]

ACCEPT, EXCEPT.—To accept means “to take something offered;” to except means “to make an exception of.”

ADVERTISE, ADVISE.—To advertise is “to announce to the public” to advise is “to give counsel or information to a person.”

AFFECT, EFFECT.—To affect is “to act upon,” “to influence;” to effect is “to bring about.”

ALLEVIATE, RELIEVE.—To alleviate pain is “to lighten” it; to relieve it is to go further, and “to remove it in a large measure or altogether.”

ALLOW, ADMIT, THINK.—Allow properly means to “grant” or “permit,” not to “admit,” “think” or “intend.”

ALLUDE TO, REFER TO, MENTION.—We mention a thing when we name it directly. We refer to it when we speak of it less directly. We allude to it when we refer to it in a delicate or slight way.

ARGUE, AUGUR.—To argue is “to bring forward reasons;” to augur is “to foretell,” “to forebode.”

COMPARE WITH, COMPARE TO, CONTRAST.—“Two things are compared in order to note the points of resemblance and difference between them; they are contrasted in order to note the points of difference only. When one thing is compared to another, it is to show that the first is like the second; when one thing is compared with another, it is to show either difference or similarity, especially difference.”[102]

CONSTRUE, CONSTRUCT.—“To construe means ‘to interpret,’ ‘to show the meaning;’ to construct means ‘to build;’ we may construe a sentence as in translation, or construct it as in composition.”[103]

CONVINCE, CONVICT.—“To convince is ‘to satisfy the understanding;’ to convict, ‘to pronounce guilty.’ ‘The jury having been convinced of the prisoner’s guilt, he was convicted.’”

DETECT, DISCRIMINATE.—To detect is “to find out;” to discriminate is “to distinguish between.”

DISCLOSE, DISCOVER.—To disclose is “to uncover,” “to reveal;” to discover is, in modern usage, “to find.”

DOMINATE, DOMINEER.—To dominate is “to rule;” to domineer is “to rule in an overbearing manner.”

DRIVE, RIDE.—We go driving in carriages, riding in saddles. We drive behind horses, we ride on them.

ELIMINATE, ELICIT.—To eliminate is “to remove,” “to get rid of;” to elicit is “to draw out.”

ESTIMATE, ESTEEM.—To estimate is “to judge the value of;” to esteem is “to set a high value on,” especially of persons.

EXPOSE, EXPOUND.—To expose is “to lay bare to view;” to expound is “to explain the meaning of.”

FRIGHTEN.—Frighten is a transitive verb, and is used correctly in “The locomotive frightened the horse;” “The horse was frightened by the locomotive;” “The horse became frightened.” It should not be used intransitively, as in the sentence “The horse frightened at the locomotive.”

INQUIRE, INVESTIGATE.—To inquire is “to ask for information;” to investigate is “to make a thorough examination.”

INSURE, SECURE.—Secure, in the sense of “to guard from danger,” “to make safe,” is preferable to insure, since insure also means “to guarantee indemnity for future loss or damage.”

LET, LEAVE.—Let means “to permit;” leave, “to let remain,” or “to go away from.”

LOCATE, FIND.—Locate properly means “to place in a particular position,” or “to designate the site of,” as of a new building or purchased lands; it does not mean to find.

PERSUADE, ADVISE.—To persuade is “to induce,” “to convince;” to advise is “to give counsel or information.”

Page 65

PREDICATE, PREDICT.—To predicate is “to affirm as an attribute or quality;” to predict is “to foretell.”

PRESCRIBE, PROSCRIBE.—To prescribe is “to lay down as a rule or a remedy;” to proscribe is “to condemn to death or to loss of rights.”

PURPOSE, PROPOSE.—“The verb purpose, in the sense of ‘intend,’ is preferable to propose, since to propose also means ‘to offer for consideration;’ the noun answering to the former is purpose; to the latter, proposal or proposition.”[104]

REPULSE, REPEL.—Repulse usually implies hostility; repel is a milder term. We repulse an enemy or an assailant; we repel an officious person or the unwelcome advances of a lover.

START, BEGIN, COMMENCE.—To start is “to set out” or “to set going,” and is not followed by an infinitive. Before an infinitive, “begin” or “commence” is used. “Begin is preferred in ordinary use; commence has more formal associations with law and procedure, combat, divine service, and ceremonial.”[105]

SUSPECT, EXPECT, ANTICIPATE.—To suspect is “to mistrust,” “to surmise.” Expect, in the sense of “look forward to,” is preferable to anticipate, since anticipate also means “take up, perform, or realize beforehand;” as, “Some real lives do actually anticipate the happiness of heaven.”

CHAPTER VI.

OF ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS

AN ADJECTIVE is a word joined by way of description or limitation to a noun or a pronoun.

An ADVERB is a word joined by way of limitation or emphasis to a verb, an adjective, or another adverb.

VULGARISMS.[110]—Every educated person is expected to know the correct use of the following words:—

GOOD, WELL.—Good is an adjective: the adverb corresponding to it is well. We say, “He had a good sleep;” “He slept well.” Well is sometimes an adjective, as in “You look well.”

LIKELY, PROBABLY, LIKE.—Likely is now used as an adjective only, except in the phrase “As likely as not;” and the corresponding adverb is probably. We say, “He is likely to come;” “He will probably come.” Like as an adjective means “similar,” as, “Men of like excellence;” “He looks like his grandfather;” “He was a man of like passions as we are.” In the sense of “in the same manner as” like is followed by a noun or a pronoun in the objective case, and is called by some an adverb, by others a preposition: as, “He talks like her.”

LESS, FEWER, SMALLER.—Less refers to quantity, fewer to number, smaller to size.

MOST, ALMOST.—Most denotes “the greatest number, quantity, or degree.” It is always superlative and never means “nearly,” which is the proper meaning of almost. We say, “Most of the boys are here; the time has almost come.”

NEAR, NEARLY.—Near is an adjective; the corresponding adverb is nearly.

PLENTY is now in good use as a noun only, as “Plenty of corn and wine.”^[111] Shakespeare used the word as an adjective in “Reasons as plenty as blackberries,” but this use is obsolete. The use of plenty as an adverb, as “The food is plenty good enough,” is a vulgarism.

SOME, SOMEWHAT, SOMETHING.—Some is an adjective, as, “Some water;” “Some brighter clime.” Somewhat is an adverb, as, “He is somewhat better.” “Somewhat” is occasionally used as a noun, as, “Somewhat of doubt remains,” but in this sense something is more common.

THIS, THESE; THAT, THOSE.—This (plural these) and that (plural those) are the only adjectives in English that have distinct forms for the plural. A common mistake is to use the plural forms with singular collective nouns, as “kind,” “class,” “sort.”

FIRST, SECOND, SECONDLY, etc.—First is both adjective and adverb. Second, third etc., are adjectives only; the corresponding adverbs are secondly, thirdly, etc. Firstly is a vulgarism.

Everywheres, illy, lesser, light-complected, muchly, nowhere near, unbeknown are not in reputable use.

ADJECTIVE or ADVERB.[112]—Illiterate persons often forget that adjectives go with nouns and pronouns, but adverbs with verbs, adjectives, and adverbs. Even cultivated persons are sometimes in doubt whether to use an adjective or an adverb after certain verbs, as “grow,” “look,” “sound,” “smell,” “taste.” If the added word applies to the subject of the verb, it should be an adjective; if to the verb, it should be an adverb. We say “We feel warm” when we mean that we are warm; we say “We feel warmly on this subject,” when we mean that our feeling is warm. “As a rule, it is proper to use an adjective whenever some form of the verb ‘to be’ or ‘to seem’ may be substituted for the verb, an adverb when no such substitution can be made.”[113] Thus, “He looked angry; he spoke angrily.” Sometimes we may use either adjective or adverb with no difference in meaning: as, “We were sitting quiet (quietly) round the fire.”

Regarding the form of adverbs, ill-taught pupils often suppose that all words ending in “-ly” are adverbs, and that all adverbs end in “-ly.” A glance at the italicized words in the following expressions will remove this delusion: “Come here,” “very pretty,” “he then rose,” “lay it lengthwise,” “he fell backward,” “run fast,” “now it is done,” “a friendly Indian,” “a buzzing fly.” Though no comprehensive rule can be given for the form of adverbs, which must be learned for the most part by observation, it may be helpful to know that most “adjectives of quality,” like gentle, true, take the suffix “-ly” to make a corresponding adverb; and that the comparative and superlative degrees of adverbs ending in “-ly” usually prefix more and most.

[112] “Foundations,” pp. 120-128. [113] Ibid., p. 121.

EXERCISE LXIV.

He has acted strange (strangely). 22. The water feels warm (warmly). 23. We feel warm (warmly) on that subject. 24. The dead warrior looked fierce (fiercely). 25. The wind blows very cold (coldly) to-day. 26. War clouds rolling dim (dimly). 27. The shutters are painted green (greenly). 28. She works good (well) and neat (neatly). 29. Protestants believe that the bread of the Lord's supper is not real (really) changed, but remains real (really) bread.

30. Homer says the blood of the gods is not real (really) blood, but only something like it.

31. Real (really) kings hide away their crowns in their wardrobes, and affect a plain and poor exterior.

Page 75

ALONE, ONLY.—“In the Bible and earlier English alone is often used for the adverb only, but it is now becoming restricted to its own sense of ‘solitary,’ ‘unaccompanied by other persons or things’;”[116] as, “He rode all unarmed, and he rode all alone.” Only is both adjective and adverb.

[115] See “Foundations,” p. 121. [116] The Century Dictionary.

EXERCISE LXVII.

Fill each blank with the proper word (“only,” “alone”):—

1. She —— of all the family had courage to go —— into that darkened room.
2. These books are sold in sets ——.
3. Man cannot live on bread ——.
4. This fault —— is enough to make her disagreeable.
5. By chance —— did he escape the gallows.
6. Not —— at Ephesus, but throughout all Asia, Paul persuaded many people.
7. To be successful a school paper must be supported, not —— with subscriptions, but also with contributions.

OMITTED ADVERBS.[117]—Adverbs necessary to the sense should not be omitted. This fault is especially common after so, too, and very—words which, as they express degree, properly qualify adjectives or adverbs, and not verbs or participles; also after behave, which, like the noun “behavior,” requires a qualifying word to determine the meaning.

[117] “Foundations,” p. 123.

EXERCISE LXVIII.

Supply the omitted adverbs:—

1. He was very struck by what she said.
2. I wish you would behave.
3. The king was very dissatisfied with his wife.
4. I have too trusted to my own wild wants.
5. If you cannot behave yourself, you had better stay at home.
6. We are very pleased to see you.

REDUNDANT ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS.[118]—A word that is not needed is said to be “redundant.” Redundant expressions should be carefully avoided.

[118] Ibid., pp. 123-125.

EXERCISE LXIX.

Strike out the useless adjectives and adverbs:—

1. From thence they marched twenty miles. 2. Which do you prefer most, apples or oranges? 3. Whenever I meet him he always stops me. 4. Celia wished to accompany Rosalind; therefore they both set out together.
5. The view from the top is simply beautiful. 6. Finally Rosalind disclosed her true identity. 7. The exercises are appointed for 2 P.M. to-morrow afternoon. 8. There are numerous mountain streams all throughout this region which abound in brook trout.
9. The central pith of the report is as follows. 10. Secluded and alone, he now partook of his solitary repast, which he entirely consumed.
11. Out of the second term I took out the factor x . 12. Right in behind East Rock we have a beautiful lake. 13. When everything was all ready they started off. 14. He was a boy of eighteen years old. 15. If the ground is uneven they just level it off with a shovel. 16. Once the two twins were shipwrecked while on a sailing voyage. 17. The purple bird was once a royal king named Picus. 18. A large search-light will show a sail at a distance of three or four miles away.

19. Each of the provinces was ruled over by a duke. 20. When he returned he entered into the printing business. 21. He had a good chance to shift off the sky to the shoulders of Hercules.

22. The mud falls off from the wheels and makes the street dirty. 23. An old merchant of Syracuse, named A□geon, had two twin sons. 24. He was almost universally admired and respected by all who knew him. 25. Pretty soon the man's hands began to get all blistered. 26. Before you go you must first finish your work. 27. He did it equally as well as his friends. 28. It must be ten years ago since he left town. 29. Collect together all the fragments. 30. The play opens up with a scene in a forest. 31. He has the universal good-will of everybody. 32. Please raise up the window. 33. The story ends up happily. 34. They always entered school together every morning. 35. Out of the entire pack only two dogs remained. 36. He went away, but soon reappeared again. 37. A monstrous large snake crawled out from under the identical stone on which you are this very minute sitting.

38. I was deceived by false misrepresentations. 39. This question opened up the whole subject. 40. Let us, however, endeavor to trace up some of this hearsay evidence as far towards its source as we are able. 41. I will see you later on.

MISUSED ADJECTIVES and ADVERBS.[119]—See the remarks under “Misused Nouns.” An amusing illustration of misused adjectives was furnished by an illiterate man who introduced his second wife to a friend as “My late wife.”

I.

AGGRAVATING, IRRITATING.—In good use aggravating means “making heavier, more grave, worse in some way.” It is often misused for irritating, exasperating, or provoking.

ALL, THE WHOLE.—See page 120.

APT, LIKELY, LIABLE.—Apt implies a natural predisposition, an habitual tendency. “Likely implies a probability of whatever character; liable, an unpleasant probability.”[120] One is apt to speak quickly, likely to hear good news, liable to be hurt.

BOTH, EACH, EVERY.—Both, meaning “the two, and not merely one of them,” groups objects, as, “Both were men of hot temper.” Each means “all of any number, considered one by one," as, "Each boy recited in his turn." Every means "all of any number, considered as composing a group or class," as, "Every pupil should have a dictionary and use it freely." "Every directs attention chiefly to the totality, each chiefly to the individuals composing it. It may also be observed that each usually refers to a numerically definite group.... Thus, 'Each theory is open to objection' relates to an understood enumeration of theories, but 'Every theory is open to objection' refers to all theories that may exist." [121]

MANY, MUCH.—Many refers to number, much to quantity.

MUTUAL, COMMON.—Mutual properly means “reciprocal,” “interchanged.” It is often misused for common in the sense of “belonging equally to both or all,” especially in the phrase, “A mutual friend.”

PARTLY, PARTIALLY.—“Partly, in the sense of ‘in part,’ is preferable to partially, since partially also means ‘with partiality.’”[122]

QUITE, VERY.—Quite properly means “entirely”; in the sense of “very” or “to a considerable degree” it is not in good use.

SO-AS, AS-AS.—Both so and as are used as adverbs of degree correlative with the conjunction “as”: unless there is a negative in the clause as is generally used; with a negative so is preferable to as. We say “It is as cold as ice,” “It is not so good as it looks.”

II.

APPARENTLY, EVIDENTLY, MANIFESTLY.—“Apparently is properly used of that which seems, but may not be, real; evidently, of that which both seems and is real.”[123] Manifestly is stronger than evidently.

AVERAGE, ORDINARY.—Average implies an arithmetical computation; if four persons lose respectively $10, $20, $30, and $40, the average loss is $25. The word is used figuratively by Dr. O.W. Holmes in “The average intellect of five hundred persons, taken as they come, is not very high.” In the sense of “usual,” “common in occurrence,” “of the usual standard,” ordinary is preferable to average.

BOUND, DETERMINED.—Bound properly means “obliged,” “fated,” or “under necessity”: as, “A man is bound by his word;” “We hold ourselves in gratitude bound to receive ... all such persons.” In the sense of “determined” bound is not in good use. In the sense of “sure” it is in colloquial, but not in literary, use.

CONTINUAL, CONTINUOUS.—“Continual is used of frequently repeated acts, as, ‘Continual dropping wears away a stone;’ continuous, of uninterrupted action, as, ‘the continuous flowing of a river.’”[125]

DEADLY, DEATHLY.—“Deathly, in the sense of ‘resembling death,’ as, ‘She was deathly pale,’ is preferable to deadly, since deadly also means ‘inflicting death.’”[124]

DECIDED, DECISIVE.—“A decided opinion is a strong opinion, which perhaps decides nothing; a decisive opinion settles the question at issue. A lawyer may have decided views on a case; the judgment of a court is decisive.”[125]

Page 79

DUMB, STUPID.—Dumb properly means “mute,” “silent.” Its misuse for stupid is partly due, especially in Pennsylvania, to its resemblance to the German dumm.

EXISTING, EXTANT.—That is extant which has escaped the ravages of time (used chiefly of books, manuscripts, etc.); that is existing which has existence.

FUNNY, ODD.—Funny means “comical;” in the sense of “strange” or “odd” it is not in good use.

HEALTHY, HEALTHFUL, WHOLESOME.—That is healthy which is in good health; that is healthful or wholesome which produces health. Wholesome commonly applies to food.

HUMAN, HUMANE.—Human denotes what pertains to man as man; as, “human nature,” “human sacrifices.” Humane means “compassionate.”

LATEST, LAST.—Latest, like the word “late,” contains a distinct reference to time; that is latest which comes after all others in time: as, “The latest news;” “The latest fashion.” Last, which was originally a contraction of “latest,” is now used without any distinct reference to time, and denotes that which comes after all others in space or in a series: as, “The last house on the street;” “The Last of the Mohicans.”

LENGTHY, LONG.—Lengthy is said to have originated in the United States, but the earliest quotations found are from British authors. In the introduction to the second series of The Biglow Papers, Mr. Lowell wrote: “We have given back to England the excellent adjective lengthy ... thus enabling their journalists to characterize our President’s messages by a word civilly compromising between long and tedious, so as not to endanger the peace of the two countries by wounding our national sensitiveness to British criticism.” Lengthy is used chiefly of discourses or writings, and implies tediousness. Long is used of anything that has length.

MAD, ANGRY.—Mad means “insane;” in the sense of “angry” it is not in good use.

NEW, NOVEL.—That is new which is not old; that is novel which is both new and strange.

ORAL, VERBAL.—“Oral, in the sense of ‘in spoken words,’ is preferable to verbal, since verbal means ‘in words’ whether spoken or written.”[126]

PITIABLE, PITIFUL.—“Pitiable, in the sense of ‘deserving pity,’ is preferable to pitiful, since pitiful also means ‘compassionate,’ as, ‘The Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy.’”[126]

PRACTICABLE, PRACTICAL.—That is practicable which can be done; that is practical which is not theoretical only: as, “a practicable plan,” “a practical electrician.”

PROMINENT, EMINENT.—Prominent means “conspicuous,” “standing out so as to be easily seen;” eminent means “distinguished in character or rank.”

Page 80

REAL, REALLY, VERY.—Real is properly an adjective, meaning “not imaginary or counterfeit,” as, “real diamonds.” Its misuse for the adverbs really and very, as, “This is real pretty,” is a vulgarism.

SCARED, AFRAID.—The participle scared means “frightened;” afraid is an adjective meaning “in fear.” Before “of,” the proper word is afraid: as, “She is afraid of horses.” Scared of is not in good use.

GRAND, GORGEOUS, AWFUL, SPLENDID, ELEGANT, LOVELY, MAGNIFICENT.—Grand properly implies “grandeur;” gorgeous, “splendid colors;” awful, “awe;” elegant, “elegance;” splendid, “splendor;” lovely, “surpassing loveliness;” magnificent, “magnificence.”

“We talk, sometimes, with people whose conversation would lead you to suppose that they had lived in a museum, where all the objects were monsters and extremes.... They use the superlative of grammar: ‘most perfect,’ ‘most exquisite,’ ‘most horrible.’ Like the French, they are enchanted, they are desolate, because you have got or have not got a shoestring or a wafer you happen to want—not perceiving that superlatives are diminutives and weaken.... All this comes of poverty. We are unskilful definers. From want of skill to convey quality, we hope to move admiration by quantity. Language should aim to describe the fact.... ‘Tis very wearisome, this straining talk, these experiences all exquisite, intense, and tremendous.”[127]

EXERCISE LXXIV.[128]

Illustrate by original sentences the correct use of each of these words: —Both, each, every, aggravating, liable, likely, apt, mutual, partially, quite, average, bound, continual, continuous, deadly, deathly, decided, decisive, dumb, apparently, evidently, extant, funny, healthy, healthful, wholesome, human, humane, latest, last, lengthy, mad, novel, verbal, pitiable, pitiful, practicable, practical, prominent, eminent, real, really, scared, grand, gorgeous, awful, splendid, elegant, lovely, magnificent.

USE of the COMPARATIVE AND SUPERLATIVE.—The comparative degree is preferable when two things or sets of things are compared, the superlative when three or more are compared.

To say “Iron is more useful than any metal” is clearly incorrect, because iron is included in “any metal,” and of course iron is not more useful than itself. We must in thought set iron off in a class by itself, which we can do by inserting “other” after “any.” “Iron is more useful than any other metal” is correct. After comparatives accompanied by “than,” the words “any” and “all” should be followed by “other.”

To say “Iron is the most useful of any (or, any other) metal” is also clearly incorrect, because we mean that iron is the most useful, not of “one metal (no matter which)” or of “some metals (no matter which),” but of all metals. We should therefore omit the word “any,” saying simply “Iron is the most useful of (all) metals.” It is also incorrect to say “Iron is the most useful of all other metals,” for iron is not one of the “other metals.” Beware of using “any” or “other” with superlatives followed by “of.”

[128] See note To the Teacher, p. 41.

EXERCISE LXXV.

ADJECTIVES and ADVERBS INCAPABLE OF COMPARISON.[129]— Some adjectives and adverbs have meanings which do not vary in degree: as, dead, perfect, wooden. Such adjectives cannot properly be compared or modified by the words "more," "most," "so," "too," and "very."

[129] "Foundations," p. 135.

EXERCISE LXXVIII.

Which of the following adjectives and adverbs do not vary in degree?— Absolutely, brave, cloudless, cold, conclusively, continually, entirely, essentially, extreme, faultless, French, fundamental, golden, happy, impregnable, inaudible, incessant, incredible, indispensable, insatiate, inseparable, intangible, intolerable, invariable, long, masterly, round, sharp, square, sufficient, unanimous, unbearable, unbounded, unerring, unique, universally, unparalleled, unprecedented.

MISPLACED ADJECTIVES AND ADVERBS.[130]—A word, a phrase, or a clause used as an adjective or an adverb should come next to the word, or words, which it modifies.

The word only requires special care. Observe how the position of only affects the meaning in the following sentences: “Only he lost his hat;” “He only lost his hat;” “He lost only his hat,” or “He lost his hat only;” “He lost his only hat.”

[130] "Foundations," p. 136.

EXERCISE LXXIX.

Correct the errors of position in the following sentences:—

1. Metal reflectors are only used now for cheap search-lights. 2. I will only mention some of the best. 3. I only had time to read "King Lear." 4. He only spoke to me, not to you. 5. Coons are only killed with the help of dogs. The coon only comes out in the night-time.
6. Lost, a Scotch terrier, by a gentleman, with his ears cut close. 7. Canteens were issued to the soldiers with short necks. 8. We all went to the sea-shore for a little fresh air from the city. 9. 20. My cousin caught a crab and took it home in a pail of water which we had for our tea.
21. I scarcely ever remember to have had a rougher walk.

ADVERBS between TO and THE INFINITIVE.—"A careful writer will do well to avoid the construction which places the adverb between to and the infinitive. It is true that the construction is a common one; but it is also true that those who are most addicted to the practice are not those who count most as authorities on questions of good usage." [131]

CHAPTER VII.

OF PREPOSITIONS

MISUSED PREPOSITIONS.[132]—A writer, in choosing the proper preposition to express his meaning, must rely chiefly on his sense of idiom, that is, his knowledge of English usage, but he may find the following notes helpful.

AMONG, BETWEEN.—“Among is the proper word when the reference is to more than two persons or things, or groups of persons or things; between, when the reference is to two only.”[133]

AT, IN.—Before names of places to denote “where,” at is used when the place is so small as to be treated as a mere point, or when, although large, it is viewed as a mere point; in is used when it is desired to make prominent the idea “within the bounds of:” as, “He arrived at Liverpool in the morning and remained in that city two days.” Before the name of the place in which the speaker dwells, if the place is of any size, in is generally preferred to at, unless the place is so remote that it dwindles in the mental vision to a point.

BACK OF.—Back of, though frequently heard in conversation and sometimes seen in print, is not in good use.

BESIDE, BESIDES.—Beside means “by the side of;” besides is now used only in the sense of “in addition to,” “other than:” as, “Who sits beside you?” “Who besides us knows this?”

BY, WITH.—To introduce the agent of an action by is now commonly used; the material instrument or tool is usually introduced by with: as, “Duncan was murdered by Macbeth with a dagger.”

DIFFERENT FROM, DIFFERENT TO.—Different from is preferable to different to and different than.

IN, INTO.—“In implies presence inside of, or within; into implies movement to the inside of. Before a man can move in a room, he must already have moved into it.”[134]

IN, ON.—Before names of streets, in implies some reference to surroundings; on is less definite, indicating location only.

ON TO, ONTO.—“Good use does not support either on to or onto.”[135]

WAIT FOR, WAIT ON.—To wait for means “to await,” as, “We will wait for you at the corner.” To wait on means “to attend on,” as, “At dinner the women waited on the men.”

CHAPTER VIII.

OF CONJUNCTIONS

VULGARISMS.[141]—Every educated person is expected to know the correct use of the following words:—

LIKE, AS.—In good use like is never a conjunction, and therefore it cannot be used instead of as to introduce a clause. It is incorrect to say, “Walk like I walk,” but one may say, “He walks like me,” or “He looks like his grandfather.”[142]

EXCEPT, WITHOUT, UNLESS.—Except, which was originally a past-participle, was once in good use as a conjunction; but in modern use it has been displaced as a conjunction by unless, and is now a preposition only. We may say, “All went except me,” but we may not say, “Except you go with me, I will stay at home.” Another word not in good use as a conjunction, but often heard instead of “unless,” is without.

[141] “Foundations,” p. 152. [142] See page 109.

EXERCISE LXXXVI.

Insert the proper word in each blank:—

LIKE, AS. 1. Do —— I do. 2. She fears a chicken —— you fear a snake. 3. Thin bushy hair falls down on each side of his face somewhat —— Longfellow's hair did in his later life.

4. I wish I could sing —— she can. 5. I will be a lawyer —— my father. 6. I will be a lawyer —— my father was. 7. She looks —— (if) she were crying. 8. He acted —— (if) he were guilty. 9. Our snow-tunnel looked —— we imagined Aladdin's cave looked. 10. He treated me —— a cat treats a mouse. 11. Seventy-five cents a day will not feed those men —— they wish to be fed.

12. The lines in this stanza are not forced —— in other stanzas. 13. If I were a boy —— Ralph is, I would try to stop the thing.

EXCEPT, WITHOUT, UNLESS. 14. I do not know how my horse got away — somebody untied him. 15. Do not come — you hear from me. 16. I will not go — father is willing. 17. I will not go — father's consent. 18. — you study better, you will be dropped. 19. It will be cool to-morrow — a hot wave comes. 20. I cannot go — money. 21. I cannot go — father sends me some money. 22. I will be there promptly — I hear from you. 23. Do not write — you feel in the mood for it. 24. She has no fault — diffidence. 25. She has no fault — it be diffidence. 26. He cannot enlist — with his guardian's consent.

MISUSED CONJUNCTIONS.[143]—Conjunctions are few in number and are more definite in their meanings than prepositions. Most errors in using them spring from confused thinking or hasty writing. "A close reasoner and a good writer in general may be known by his pertinent use of connectives." [144]

AND.—And has, generally speaking, the meaning of "in addition to."

BUT.—But implies some exception, opposition, or contrast. Equivalent, or nearly equivalent, expressions are "however," "on the other hand," "yet," "nevertheless."

AS.—"As has so many meanings that it is better, when possible, to use a conjunction that covers less ground." [145]

BECAUSE, FOR, SINCE.—The difference between these words is chiefly a difference in emphasis. "We will not go, because it is raining" is the strongest way of expressing the relation of cause and effect. In "Since it is raining, we will not go," the emphasis is shifted from the cause to the effect, which becomes the prominent idea. In "We will not go, for it is raining," the reason, "it is raining," is announced as itself a bit of news. Often the choice between these words is decided by the ear.

HOW.—How properly means "in what manner" or "to what extent." It is often misused for "that" to introduce an object clause.

NOR, OR.—Nor is the correlative of neither, sometimes of other negatives. Or is the correlative of either.

THEREFORE, SO.—In the sense of "for this reason," therefore is preferable to so, since so has other meanings.

THOUGH.—Though means "notwithstanding," "in spite of the fact that."

AS IF, AS THOUGH.—"As if is, on the whole, preferable to as though." [146]

WHEN, WHILE.—When means "at the time that;" while, "during the time that," "as long as." "When fixes attention on a date or period; while fixes attention on the lapse of time." [147]

EXERCISE LXXXVII.

Insert the proper conjunction in each blank, if a conjunction is needed. Do not confine your choice to those mentioned above:—

1. Roland was mild and modest, — Charles was coarse and boastful. 2. — they were without provisions, they thought they should starve. 3. In Addison's day innumerable vices were prevalent, — chief among them was the custom of drinking.
4. Charles was a large, brawny fellow, — Orlando was a slender youth. 5. When the barn was full of people, the doors were suddenly shut and bolted — the barn was set on fire.
6. Hereward's men wanted booty, — Hereward took them to the Golden Borough.
7. He read a short — interesting account of "Theobald's." 8. Longfellow received a good education — he was not a poor boy. 9. He was disappointed in the speed of his yacht, — he had expected her to be very fast.
10. The man said "to sell" was not needed on the sign — no one would expect the hats to be given away.
11. There is no doubt — the earth is spherical. 12. I know very little about the "Arabian Nights" — I have never read that book.
13. When Gulliver began to pull, the ships would not move — their anchors held them.
14. He had to be cautious in using his Bible — at that time reading it was prohibited; — he fastened it with tapes on the underside of a stool.
15. The Liberal Arts Building at Chicago had twice as much iron in its frame — the Brooklyn Bridge.
16. The lumbermen must keep open a road to the railroad, — all their provisions must be brought from the city.
17. Scarcely had I thrown in my line — I felt a nibble. 18. The fly seems to have been created for no other purpose — to purify the air.
19. At first you wonder where the boats are, — on entering the grove you can see only a small cabin.
20. I do not doubt — he will succeed. 21. I cannot deny — he is honest. 22. He was dismissed, not so much because he was too young — because he was indolent.
23. The land is equally adapted to farming — to pasturage. 24. Proportion is — simple — compound. 25. I wonder — he will come. 26. The last of the horses had scarcely crossed the bridge — the head of the third battalion appeared on the other side.
27. He looked as — he could play football. 28. — I saw her, she was young — beautiful. 29. Bruce spoke of himself as being neither Scotch —— English. 30. I could —— buy —— borrow it. 31. He has no love —— veneration for his superiors. 32. There was no place so hidden —— so remote —— the plague did not find it.

33. We need not, —— do not, complain of our lot. 34. He could not deny —— he had borrowed money. 35. There is no question —— the universe has bounds. 36. A corrupt government is nothing else —— a reigning sin. 37. She thinks, I regret to say, of little else — clothes. 38. O fairest flower, no sooner blown — blasted. 39. There is no other hat here — mine. 40. — you have come, I will go with you. 41. — Virgil was the better artist, Homer was the greater genius. 42. He has not decided — he will let me go to college. 43. Sheep are white — black. 44. The King has no arbitrary power; your Lordships have not — the Commons; — the whole Legislature.

45. No tie of gratitude — of honor could bind him. 46. She had no sooner arrived — she prepared to go boating. 47. Scarcely had she left the house — she returned. 48. He was punished, — he was guilty. 49. He was punished, — he was not guilty. 50. We cannot go — we finish our task. 51. — the rain came down in torrents, we started for the lake. 52. She could — dance — sing, — she played the piano. 53. I do not know — I shall walk — ride. 54. Hardly had he left the room — the prisoner attempted to escape. 55. The chances are ten to one — he will forget it. 56. Stand up so — you can be seen.

OMITTED CONJUNCTIONS.—Careless writers sometimes omit conjunctions that are necessary either to the grammar or to the sense. A common form of this fault is illustrated in “This is as good if not better than that”—a sentence in which “as” is omitted after “as good.” The best way to correct the sentence is to recast it, thus: “This is as good as that, if not better.”

EXERCISE LXXXVIII.

Correct the faults in these sentences:—

1. Ralph is as young or younger than Harry. 2. Cedar is more durable but not so hard as oak. 3. I never heard any one speak more fluently or so wittily as he. 4. She is fairer but not so amiable as her sister. 5. Though not so old, he is wiser than his brother.

REDUNDANT CONJUNCTIONS.—[148] Careless writers sometimes insert conjunctions that are useless or worse than useless. A common form of this fault is the use in certain cases of “and” or “but” before the words “who,” “which,” “when,” or “where,” which are themselves connectives: as, “The challenge was accepted by Orlando, a young man little known up to that time, but to whom Rosalind had taken a great liking.” If the relative clause introduced by “who,” “which,” “when,” or “where” is to be joined to a preceding relative clause, the conjunction is proper: as, “The challenge was accepted by Orlando, a young man who was little known at that time, but to whom Rosalind had taken a great liking.”

[148] See “Foundations,” pp. 208-211.

EXERCISE LXXXIX.

Which conjunctions in these sentences are redundant?—

Page 94

1. I have again been so fortunate as to obtain the assistance of Dr. Jones, a teacher of great experience, and whose ideas are quite in harmony with my own.
2. Franklin had noticed for some time the extreme dirtiness of the streets, and especially of the street that he lived on.
3. This animal was considered as irresistible.
4. But how to get him there was a problem. But it was decided to convey him on one of the wagons used in carrying the Emperor's men-of-war from the woods, where they were made, to the water.
5. He forgot to pay for the wine—a shortness of memory common with such men, and which his host did not presume to correct.
6. Next came Louis, Duke of Orleans, the first prince of the blood royal, and to whom the attendants rendered homage as the future king.
7. So from all this you can see that such things are not impossible.
8. Her expression of countenance induced most persons to address her with a deference inconsistent with her station, and which nevertheless she received with easy composure.
9. Our escort consisted of MacGregor, and five or six of the handsomest, best armed, and most athletic mountaineers of his band, and whom he had generally in immediate attendance upon his own person.
10. The little town of Lambtos, Mrs. Gardiner's former home, and where she had lately learned that some acquaintance still remained.
11. He spoke in a deep and low tone, but which nevertheless was heard from one end of the hall to the other.

MISPLACED CORRELATIVES.—When conjunctions are used as correlatives, as “both-and,” “either-or,” each of the correlated words should be so placed as to indicate clearly what ideas are to be connected in thought. This principle is violated in “He not only visited Paris, but Berlin also.” In this sentence the position of “not only” before the verb “visited” leads one to expect some corresponding verb in the second part of the sentence; in fact, however, the two connected words are “Paris” and “Berlin;” “visited” applies to both. This meaning is clearly indicated by putting “not only” before “Paris:” thus, “He visited not only Paris, but Berlin also.” As a rule the word after the first correlative should be the same part of speech as the word after the second correlative.

EXERCISE XC.

Correct the errors of position in—

1. Few complaints were made either by the men or the women.
2. Search-lights are not useful only on ships, but also on land.
3. Adversity both teaches to think and to be patient.
4. My uncle gave me not only the boat, but also taught me to row it.
5. The prisoner was not only accused of robbery, but of treason.
6. The wise ruler does not aim at the punishment of offenders, but at the prevention of offences.

7. The king was weak both in body and mind. 8. He either is stupid or insolent. 9. He worked not to provide for the future, but the present. 10. Every composition is liable to criticism both in regard to its design and to its execution.
11. The gods are either angry or nature is too powerful. 12. We are neither acquainted with the Doctor nor with his family. 13. In estimating the work of Luther, we must neither forget the temper of the man nor the age in which he lived.
14. The wise teacher should not aim to repress, but to encourage his pupils.
15. Such rules are useless both for teachers and pupils. 16. Her success is neither the result of cleverness nor of studiousness.

APPENDIX

SUGGESTIONS TO TEACHERS

The following suggestions are made in answer to many inquiries from teachers who perceive the rare excellence of the “Foundations of Rhetoric,” but who do not clearly see, because of the novel method of the book, how to turn its merits to account in their class-rooms. The suggestions outline one way in which the book has been used to great advantage.

It should never be forgotten that the illustrative sentences in the “Foundations” have no value except as they help the student to grasp a principle that he can apply in his own use of language. In every case the emphasis should be laid on the principle which is announced or illustrated. Merely learning the corrected sentences by heart is useless and should not be permitted.

In taking a class over PART I., which treats of words, it is the writer’s practice to assign a short lesson—from one to three pages—in connection with every recitation in English. The leading ideas and most typical sentences in each lesson are privately marked in the teacher’s book with colored pencil, so that they may readily catch his eye, and from five to twelve minutes of each recitation period are taken up with a rapid questioning on these leading ideas and typical sentences. Corrections or answers unaccompanied by reasons are not accepted. Attention is always fixed, not on the form of the illustrative sentence, but on the principle of usage under discussion. Pupils would rather commit to memory the sentences than trouble themselves about reasons; but they will master reasons when they find they must. After principles have been mastered, exercises in the choice of forms and words are needed in order that knowledge may be converted into habit.

In PARTS II. and III. the lessons are equally short and the emphasis is unceasingly laid on the question "Why?" If the subject is difficult, it is desirable, at the time that the lesson is assigned, to lead the class over the text and some of the illustrative sentences in order to open, as it were, the eyes of the pupils. Since these parts of the book treat not of single words, but of sentences and paragraphs, recitations on them seem to call for the use of pencil or chalk. One successful teacher conducts the recitation with books open, requiring her pupils to cover the correct sentences with a strip of paper while they explain and correct the faults in the incorrect sentences. The writer's practice is to paste the faulty sentences on cards of convenient size and thickness—the arrangement of columns is such that the sentences can all be cut from one old book—and to distribute them among eight or ten pupils at the beginning of the recitation hour. While other matters are being attended to, these pupils write the sentences in correct form on the blackboard, and, when the time comes, give their reasons for the changes which they have made. Their work is discussed, if necessary, by the whole class. Reviews and written tests should be frequent. As fast as the various principles explained and illustrated in PARTS II. and III. are studied, the attention of pupils should be immediately turned to their own writing. It will be far more profitable for them to correct their own offences against clearness, force, ease, and unity than to correct similar offences committed by others. For this reason the PRACTICAL EXERCISES IN ENGLISH contains no exercises on the subjects discussed in PARTS II. and III. of the "Foundations."
