Seeing through around the earth, we will find all kinds of people exist in the world. I think why those people are different from each other might be a difficult task to study-----which factor influences and drives them different. It is lucky that I am the one among them so I know that mine is my dream.

I have been stimulating by my dream, from the day I knew why I came into the world to so far and even in future, which making me different from others. It is a goal, an aim, a direction for my life. It is not strange from outside, but from inside. It is to be a philosopher.

Perhaps no one believes that there has philosopher in such modern society. I have to tell you, however, today's civilization is based on people's labor, yes, and it is, but which is not only on the physical labor, the more important is on the mental labor----the thought. If there is no thought on the earth, what will happen? I can't imagine such a devastating scene and I think no one would be willing to fancy.

What we inherit from our ancestors are wealth, knowledge and dream----our ancestors' dream. They devoted themselves to building our society, which was not for themselves but for the descendants. They had viewed it because their society existed some outstanding philosophers. That's why their society had been developed.

I am no scholar, no greatman and no saint. I am just a citizen as same as you. However, I have a dream and I believe both we have. Just like Marktin Luther King, Jr. He was no philosopher though he gave us a dream. A dream for our life. A dream for our goal. A dream for our hope. And my dream is give our descentant a dream.
