There are many people who think that personality is shown by the clothes they wear and their hair styles. In most cases, these people are influenced by their appearance, so if they meet someone they prejudge how they would be, and decide if they are interested in knowing the person or not. These people believe that if you are sad, happy or worried, you express it by the color of your clothes or the type of clothes you wear.

From my point of view, it depends on the people. Some people like to show what they feel, and they show it on everything they do, say and also wear. So, in this case, you can know what the person is feeling, but not how the person's personality is. In contrast, some people do not like to show what they feel, so in this case, you cannot know what they are feeling, as they are very reserved. Also, I believe that you cannot judge people, because you might be mistaken and lose the opportunity to know someone very nice and interesting.

Let's face it, we all pay attention on what other people wear, but this does not mean that we have the right to judge them.
