Discriminations is a huge part of todays modern day society. People judge others with out even getting to know them. They just think "oh they are Korean, why talk to them" or "Why would i want to be friends with an African American." or one you hear in a typical highschool "Eww, do you SEE the outfit she is wearing? Talk about loser" Some people dont even realize it. But it happens every day. It needs to come to a stop. No matter what some one looks like, or who they are, we are all equal. And its not what is on the outside that matters. We all have hopes or dreams of being someone, and it doesn't matter what someone looks like, their ethnic background, their nationality, its who they are on the inside. Every one is equal and people need to realize that.
